HUTCHISON REPORTS

Quebec Key For Diefenbaker

By BRUCE HUTCHISON, Editor, The Times

OTTAWA—After the whoopla of the Conservative convention and a storm of personal emotion which almost reduced him to tears, John Diefenbaker today faces the hard facts of politics and those facts are centred in Quebec.

His problem as a national party leader has many facets and many obstacles but his primary task is to break the solid Liberal hold on French Canada. It is only reporting obvious facts which Mr. Diefenbaker knows quite well, to say that he starts his march into Quebec under unneccessary difficult auspices. The convention made sure of that.

The real anatomy of the convention and its possible results in national politics became clear as soon as the delegates met. Mr. Diefenbaker clearly had a majority of votes in his pocket but he had practically none in Quebec. The French Canadian delegation came here determined to stop the Diefenbaker band wagon and, if possible, to elect Donald Fleming on a second vote after Davie Fulton had been eliminated.

Hutchison

Openly Attacked by Balcer

The opposition to Mr. Diefenbaker in Quebec was so strong that Leon Balcer, the most prominent French Canadian leader and president of the National Conservative Association, openly attacked the favorite son of the Prairies. In an almost unbelievable act of party division Mr. Balcer condemned Mr. Diefenbaker for refusing to allow a French Canadian to second his nomination. This, in Mr. Balcer's opinion, was an affront to the French Canadian race. Of course it was not so intended. Mr. Diefenbaker had invited Premier Fleming of New Brunswick and General Peck, V.C. to nominate him and thought he had thus indicated his strength from sea to sea. The Quebec delegation did not take it this way and probably cast few votes for Mr. Diefenbaker, though the ballot was secret.

Coalition With Socreds?

In accepting the leadership amidst scenes of wild enthusiasm Mr. Diefenbaker spoke appropriately in generalities. A few moments later he got down to facts before a battery of tough newspapermen and at his first press conference he handled himself superbly. His opening sentences seemed to establish the issue on which he proposes to fight the next election—the re-establishment of the two party system and the restoration of parliament's ancient liberties. They are sound valid and vote-getting issues, far more important than most of the planks in the party platform.

Did Mr. Diefenbaker expect to make inroads into Liberal Quebec? Yes, he did. Remarkably wryly that his party was in a minority he said he hoped to make gains everywhere. How did he expect to win the election? Well, he needed, he said, to change only 8½ per cent of the popular vote and this he believed could be done.

Socred Leader Dead Against Tory Merger

OTTAWA (CP)—Social Credit Leader Low said today he can see no grounds on which his party could form a coalition with the Progressive Conservatives.

He was commenting on a statement made by John Diefenbaker Friday shortly after being chosen the Conservatives' new national leader.

Mr. Low said no approach has ever been made to him with such a suggestion. Considering all the differing views held by the two parties, he added, "there would be no ground on which we could possibly do such a thing."

CHRISTMAS ON B.C.'s COAST

The story of how the Columbia Coast Mission brings Christmas to the outlying points on British Columbia's coast is the featured article in Weekend Magazine in this issue.

Yule Shopping Reaches Peak In Crowded City

Traffic - snarled streets, crowded sidewalks, tight-packed store aisles today pointed to one of the busiest Christmas seasons in Victoria's history.

Friday was payday for thousands of citizens, and from store opening time today they rushed downtown to lay in stocks of presents, food, decorations, and the tinsel and bangles of Yuletide.

Clerks in many major retail outlets didn't have time to talk between running from buyer to buyer.

Many stores said today was the heaviest buying day so far this year, and expect it to top even next Saturday.

Because of poor weather, which lightened in mid-morning, many persons had been delaying Christmas purchases. But when skies partially cleared, the sun drew them out for Christmas shopping.

Toy departments of larger stores were packed with children; clothing stores, both men's and women's, were rushed, as were candy stores, novelty shops, the five-and-dime stores and even some antique dealers.

"We can hardly move," said one store owner. Cars were double-lined on Government Street, parking space was not to be found.

Early Voting Slowed by Rain

Rain put the damper on early voting in Greater Victoria's three municipalities as annual elections for council and one police commission got under way.

Brightening skies this afternoon were expected to bring out more voters before polls close at 8 p.m.

A total estimated 950 voters out of 19,839 eligible went to Saanich polls in the first 3½ hours of balloting to 11:30 a.m.

At Oak Bay municipal hall, 664 voters had cast ballots to noon. There are 7,000 eligible voters.

In Esquimalt, where polls are set up at the municipal hall and 855 Craigflower, a light vote was recorded to noon. There are 3,328 eligible.

'CHEAP' SAYS HUNGARIAN... 'MINE BETTER'

Canada 'Second Class' From Start Say Returning Olympic Athletes

TORONTO (CP)—A Canadian Olympic Games coach and some 20 team members arrived here early today from Melbourne and said they developed inferiority complexes at the Games.

"A Hungarian track athlete came up to me one day and felt my sweat suit," related canoeist George Bossey of Montreal. "Cheap," he told me, "Mine better."

Commented Bossey: "It was, too, I represented Canada, the world's second wealthiest nation, and this guy from a small European country was better dressed than the Canadian athletes."

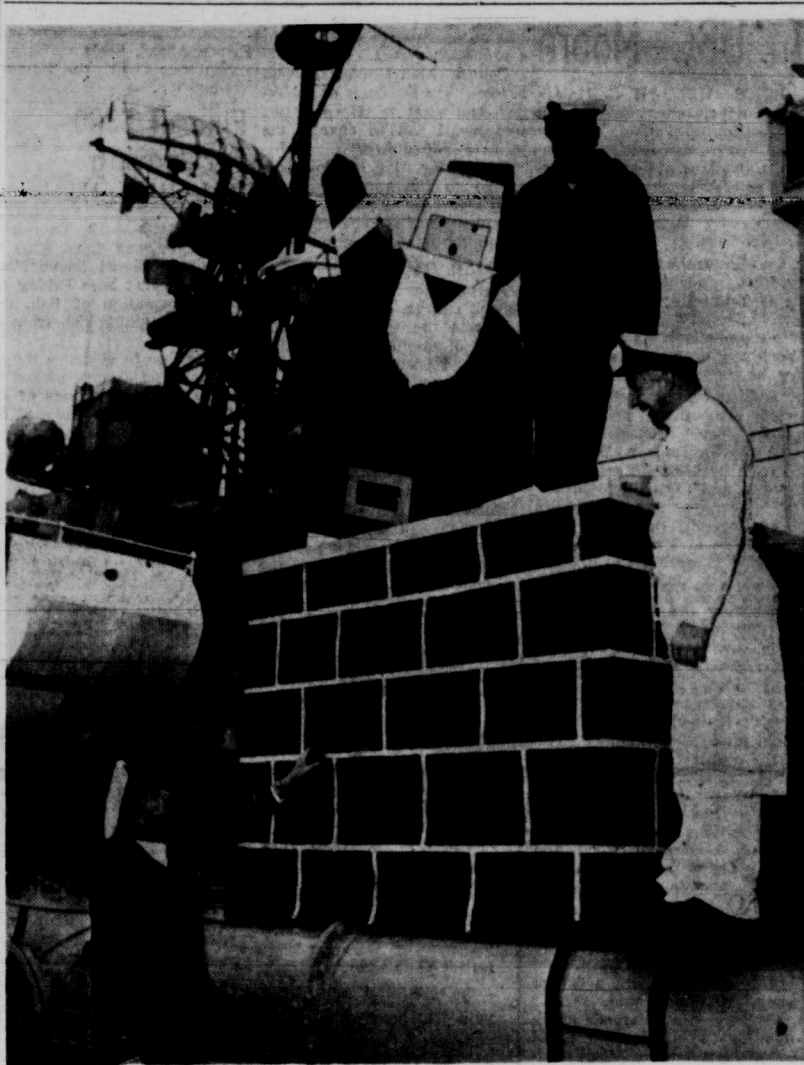

The athletes arrived here by bus from Buffalo, N.Y. Their Trans-Canada Air Lines plane from Vancouver was diverted Friday night to Buffalo when bad weather prevented a landing at Malton airport.

RAP TRAVEL CONDITIONS

Canoe coach Earl Whittall of Montreal was particularly annoyed at traveling conditions in Canada. He said athletes travelled by TCA's tourist flights both on the way to Vancouver en route to the Games and from the B.C. city on the way home.

"That means going 15 hours without a hot meal and without much sleep. . . It is as though no one in Canada cares whether we are represented in the Games or not."

TCA Atlantic Airliner Limp Home On 3 Engines; Ditching Was Feared

LONDON (CP)—A Trans-Canada Air Lines Super-Constellation landed safely at London airport today on three of its four engines.

The plane left Montreal Friday night with 61 passengers and a crew of eight.

"We had a bumpy journey over the Atlantic—even before the engine cut out," one passenger told reporters at the airport.

port. "But I am quite sure no one had any worries."

He said the passengers wore their safety belts for most of the flight.

"We didn't have to take any other precautions at all."

Pilot of the Canadian airliner was Capt. Bruce Bowden of Montreal. He sent a radio message to Shannon when the first engine—the inner starboard—quit during the night. The plane was at 23,000 feet, and he asked emergency permission to go down to 11,000 feet—below an altitude where icing conditions existed.

About 700 miles west of Ireland, a second engine began to act up, and Bowden requested air control at Prestwick, Scotland, for an escort plane. British newspapers say it was feared the plane might have had to come down at sea, and that ships in the area were asked to keep a lookout.

PRAYER FOR TODAY

O God, the source of all grace and goodness, grant us calmness and courage to face the vicissitudes of our appointed course; through Jesus Christ. Amen.

11 Grenade Raids, Kidnapping Brings Get Tough Policy

By LEONARD EDDINGTON

PORT SAID (AP)—British military authorities today seized every man, woman and child in a five-square block area in a new "get-tough" search for a kidnapped lieutenant and warned that Egyptian guerrilla attacks might provoke the British into "really violent action."

(British United Press reported the British troops seized close to 1,000 Egyptians in the raids.)

Lt. Gen. Sir Hugh Stockwell, commander of the Anglo-French force, whose withdrawal from Egypt is being harassed by guerrilla grenade and rocket attacks, sent a letter of protest to the commander of the new United Nations Emergency Force demanding that the Egyptian authorities call off what he described as "a co-ordinated and sustained campaign of violence."

Stockwell insisted: "I reserve to myself the right to take whatever action I deem necessary for the security of the force under my command."

Stockwell gave Maj. Gen. E. L. M. Burns a long list of "flagrant breaches of the cease-fire agreement" and said there were 11 separate grenade throwing incidents in the last 24 hours "including the use of rocket launchers." One Egyptian was killed.

British troops also sealed off the port area and the European quarter with a barbed wire barrier.

'Slaughter . . . Last Thing I Want to Do'

"I think that will stop people coming in here to pitch grenades," Stockwell told reporters. "That would lead to us having to take really violent action."

"The last thing I want to do on God's earth is to slaughter a lot of people."

Stockwell said he is combing out the five-square block area where a car in which 20-year-old Lieut. Anthony Moorhouse was kidnapped was found abandoned.

There was no word where he might be or whether he is dead or alive.

While the search was under way in the northwest sector of town, Egyptian guerrillas attacked again in the southwest sector, tossing a grenade off the roof of a building into a French jeep. One French soldier was reported injured.

Meanwhile, the departure of troops from Port Said appeared to be going at full speed. The British aircraft carrier Theseus sailed for England at dawn this morning with 1,100 British troops.

At El Ballah, United Nations sources said Israeli troops have halted their withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula pending a further agreement with the UN regarding the timetable and mechanics of the pullout.

Nehru Reaches London, To Talk With Eden

LONDON (AP)—Prime Minister Nehru of India arrived by plane from Paris today. He is expected to confer briefly with Prime Minister Eden before going on tonight to Washington to meet President Eisenhower.

FOG BLOCKS SEARCH FOR LOST AIRLINER

(See Also, Page 3)

For the sixth straight day bad weather today gripped the mountains of the mainland, preventing a mass air search 110 miles northeast of Victoria for an airliner missing since late Sunday with 62 persons aboard.

Fog prevailed over the Hope area and there was moderate to severe icing and freezing rain in the cloud above.

Fifty search aircraft were held to the ground.

'HUNGARY'S FIGHTING STUDENTS'

Oak Bay Pupils Aid Fund, Total Passes $4,200 Mark

Volunteers from the Junior Red Cross Club at Oak Bay Junior High School, who collected funds twice daily from classrooms between Dec. 7 and 14, raised $65 for the "Hungary Fighting Students" fund.

Even without the school contribution the fund now totals $4,217.30.

"The students felt there was no better way of showing the Christmas spirit than helping those students less fortunate than they," said Mrs. Beverley Andersen, teacher in charge of the club.

"The Red Cross students were most co-operative, for there were many more volunteers than were needed to assist in the drive," she said.

Given credit for the campaign and the daily collections were Connie Ballam, Red Cross Club president; Ron Morgan, vice-president; and members Penny Dalby, Joan Livesey, Russ Morgan, Gerry Shanks, Gordon Vickery, and David Bartlett.

The students have put a cheque for the donation in the mail, for delivery to The Times next week.

Rape Jurors Threatened

(FROM CP DISPATCHES)

NEW WESTMINSTER—Two members of an assize court jury have been threatened in an anonymous phone call, the jury foreman told Mr. Justice J. C. Rutan Friday.

Trevor Evans told the court he and juror Clarence Wells had received calls.

The jury is hearing the rape trial of Kie, Puga and Jumbo Singh.

"Don't blame the accused or attach any significance to this," the judge told the jury. "I am sure they don't know anything about it."

The foreman said his wife received a phone call about 10:40 p.m. Thursday and was told: "Your husband better get off the jury. I wouldn't want to see your husband or your family hurt."

The foreman said Mr. Wells had been warned by an anonymous person not to turn up for the trial.

Eaton was found guilty last Saturday of murdering eight-year-old Carolynne Moore of Langley. He is to be hanged March 12.

More than 100 prizes which included turkeys, kitchen utensils, china and clothing, were distributed to a happy throng at the annual Christmas party of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce at the Empress Hotel Friday.

Guests numbered 340 and included Lieutenant-Governor Frank Ross and Mrs. Ross, Rear Admiral Hugh F. Pullen and Mrs. Pullen, Mayor Percy Scurrell and Mrs. Scurrell, and reeves of the municipalities of Greater Victoria.

Vancouver Man Held by FBI On Swindle Charge

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP)—The Federal Bureau of Investigation said it arrested a man identified as Frederick Douglas Drew of Vancouver here Thursday on a swindling indictment issued in the name of Edwin P. Wetherston. Arraignment was postponed until Monday while the FBI checked fingerprints.

An indictment was issued by a federal grand jury in Chicago on Sept. 12 charging Wetherston, 53, with using interstate wires to defraud a Chicago businessman, William Seewald. The indictment allegedly concerned a $25,000 race track swindle in Florida while Seewald was on vacation.

Dormitories Substandard At UBC—Moore

PORT ALBERNI — Unless the provincial government soon makes funds available to help the University of British Columbia, Canadians are likely to become mere "hewers of wood and drawers of water," it has been forecast by Jack Moore, IWA official here.

Quoting from the "Ubysey," campus students' publication, he said dormitory conditions at the university are below the minimum standards set by the Workmen's Compensation Board for logging camps.

"Students must double up for nearly everything," he said. A recent survey revealed seven men sharing each wash basin, 33 each bathtub, 34 each laundry tub, and 73 each telephone. "Compensation board rules make such conditions illegal and punishable in logging and construction camps," he said.

URGENT NEED

Branding the Canadian public apathetic about the situation, Mr. Moore said the need is far greater and more urgent than most realized. Claiming that shortages of skilled university-trained men slowed down production in many parts of the country, Mr. Moore said: "If this situation is not rectified soon we shall gradually fall further and further behind other nations until our people end up hewers of wood and drawers of water."

"Money must be made available quickly to erect proper buildings, set up proper dormitories and residences for students from out of town, and pay faculty members a decent wage," Mr. Moore said. "If money is not made available for these things, it could mean that students from outside communities will have to do without a university education," he said.

PARLEY 'MOST SUCCESSFUL WE HAVE EVER HAD'

Pearson's Stream of Ideas Praised by NATO Delegates

DEATH IN ELECTRIC CHAIR FOR BABY KIDNAP SLAYER

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP)—Angelo Lamacra, kidnaper of baby Peter Weinberger, Friday was sentenced to die in Sing Sing Prison's electric chair the week of Jan. 28. Lamacra was convicted a week ago by a jury of 12 fathers of kidnapping and first-degree murder. The verdict carried a mandatory death penalty.

The 31-year-old mechanic and cab driver kidnapped the Weinberger baby last July 4, and abandoned the 32-day-old infant to die in a thicket off a Long Island road.

ASSAULT CHARGE REDUCED

Rifleman Admits Hitting Cab Woman

A 20-year-old soldier pleaded guilty in Oak Bay police court Friday to a reduced charge of assault causing bodily harm in connection with an attack on a woman cab driver, Nov. 24.

A more serious charge of indecent assault against Leonard Harper, QOR, was withdrawn.

Harper was advised by Magistrate H. C. Hall a week ago to obtain legal counsel as the result of information contained in a probation report.

Counsel Alan Macfarlane said Friday: "On the basis of the report and what he (Harper) has told me, I ask to change the plea to not guilty."

Prosecutor Alan Bigelow consented to the application and then asked to withdraw the indecent assault charge and substitute the lesser assault charge.

SECOND TIME

Harper pleaded guilty to the second charge.

It was the second time the charge of assault causing bodily harm had been read to him in connection with the incident.

Saanich police laid the original charge Nov. 24, the morning after Island Cab driver Mrs. Vera Rodgers was attacked on a lonely road near the Gordon Head army camp.

Subsequent investigations showed that the assault had occurred in Oak Bay. The Saanich charge was withdrawn and the indecent assault charge laid in Oak Bay court.

Mr. Macfarlane said Friday Harper had "no explanation to offer" for striking the woman.

PARIS (CP)—External Affairs Minister Pearson said the NATO Council meeting which ended Friday was "in my opinion the most successful we have ever had."

He gave two reasons:

1. That members had met in harmony after the "period of strain" on the alliance caused by Suez, and

2. That principles of consultation had been outlined which, "if followed, should remove much of the risk of the kind of differences we have recently experienced."

He also said the meeting was important in showing that NATO was not hesitant about discussing the effect on the alliance of developments outside the NATO area.

"These developments are not for NATO decision alone, or indeed for NATO consideration alone, but they are important to the Atlantic coalition which at this session faced up to their implications."

It would probably be Pearson's claim that State Secretary Dulles dominated the conference by showing a willingness to forgive and forget past differences.

But in the corridors of NATO Pearson also was getting praise for his steady stream of ideas. It was even said that the chairman occasionally turned to the Canadian minister when stumped and asked: "Has Mr. Pearson anything to say to this?"

Ulster Plans Severe Reprisals

BELFAST (AP)—The Ulster government today declared that "the kid gloves are off" and moved to invoke wartime security regulations to counter raids by gunmen of the Irish Republican Army.

Anti-Russ Riots Flare in Five Polish Centres

WARSAW (AP)—More anti-Russian demonstrations have been reported in five Polish towns.

Organs of the governing Communist party have warned that continued demonstrations might lead to a clamp-down by anti-Stalinist Polish Communist government.

Fears also are held that if the situation gets out of control, Russia may feel that its rail links through Poland to East Germany are endangered.

Emergency powers were put into effect, including authority to make arrests without a warrant and to intern suspected persons.

The regulations, effective immediately, followed renewed outbreaks of Irish Republican Army raids in Northern Ireland earlier this week.

A government spokesman said:

"The kid gloves are off. We are determined to deal with these gangs in the only language they know."

A statement said that if it became necessary to strengthen the regulations, the government would not hesitate to take whatever action was necessary to safeguard the interests of the community.

The regulations would be kept in force "only so long as the necessity for them continues." The new get-tough policy was laid down a few hours after 40 raiders crossed the border from the Irish Republic in early-morning darkness and attacked two police stations with bombs and machine-gun bullets.

It was the second big scale border raid in 48 hours by IRA men pledged to force the British out of the six counties of Northern Ireland and unite the country under the Irish Republic.

The latest raids touched off widespread demands throughout Ulster for more effective government action against the IRA.

Ulster members of parliament have accused the Irish Republic of "harboring" terrorist gangs. The IRA is illegal in the Irish Republic as well as in Ulster.

NATO Blocked In Hungary's Suicide—Spaak

PARIS (AP)—Paul-Henri Spaak declared today the Hungarian revolt was the first example in world history of the "collective suicide of a whole people."

The newly elected secretary-general of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization told a press conference that the Hungarian people "prefer a struggle to the death rather than accept an imposed regime."

Spaak said this "quality, unique in world history," could not have been foreseen—therefore no declaration by NATO could have done anything to affect the outbreak of the revolt one way or the other.

Airliner Search Clue Only 'Snow Slide'

A snow slide that curled down a mountainside Friday provided another in a series of false clues that have taunted air and ground searchers for five days in the hunt for a TCA airliner missing on the mainland, 110 miles northeast of Victoria.

The slide was spotted as "something moving" on a mountain in the Lihunston Park area, 10 miles from the Hope area where Trans-Canada Air Lines' flight 810 is believed to have crashed Sunday night with 62 passengers and crew.

A helicopter, dispatched from Chilliwack reported it was only a snow slide rolling over the mountain's edge.

It was the only concrete report from ground searchers who continued a fruitless hunt while poor weather virtually halted air search operations.

SEE NONE SURVIVING

There appeared to be almost no chance of survival for any of the persons aboard the missing aircraft.

Even the leader of the search parties admitted that a search confined to the ground was of doubtful use without the support of aircraft blanketing wide areas of the mountainous region.

Joining in Friday's search was Lawrence Bjornsson, of New Westminster, whose sister, Dorothy, was the stewardess aboard the plane. He flew in a private plane searching out of Chilliwack.

He was the second anxious relative of those aboard to make a concrete move. Wednesday, C. J. Munro tramped over Sumas Mountain in light clothing through snow and rain for six hours to check reports that the wreckage had been sighted there. His brother, Jack, was on the plane.

Thirty-two men, most of them mountain-wise loggers, worked their way through the snow Friday on foot and by truck in the continuing push across the rocky slopes of 8,500-foot Silvertip Mountain, near Hope, focal point of the hunt.

Life Blasts Red Cross Aid For Hungary

NEW YORK (AP)—Life magazine, despite criticism from the American National Red Cross, still maintains that Hungarian refugees are not receiving their fair share of relief supplies.

The magazine raised the charge in an editorial in its Dec. 14 issue. The Red Cross termed it "confusing, misleading and incorrect."

The Life editorial said some of the food brought in by the Red Cross was being sold in shops "at prices far out of reach of the average Hungarian." The editorial quoted Life correspondent Ed Clark, who was in Budapest.

Israel May Yet Get
24 Sabre Fighters

OTTAWA (CP)—A $66,000,000 deal involving sale of more than 200 Canadian Sabre jet fighters to West Germany is under negotiation. And it is also suggested here that Canada may yet go through with the suspended sale of 24 Sabres to Israel.

Sources here Friday said an agreement may be signed shortly with West Germany but, as yet, no agreement had been reached.

It was learned that the number of planes involved is about 200 valued at $330,000 each or a total of $66,000,000 or even more. A report from Bonn said West Germany is seeking 225 of the planes.

TEMPORARY SUSPENSION

The sale of 24 Sabres to Israel was suspended Oct. 31 after the outbreak of the Israel-Egyptian dispute. Prime Minister St. Laurent at that time said the suspension was "for the time being."

In Ottawa Friday, Mrs. Golda Meir, Israeli foreign minister, said she feels the ban is a "temporary" decision. Mrs. Meir is to hold talks with government officials, including the prime minister.

There was no government statement forthcoming on the sale to Israel.

Pitlammers Fined $500

GANGES—Gordon Diamond, 2049 Allenby, Victoria, and Melvin Davis, 3080 Clark Drive, Vancouver, convicted in police court here Friday on charges of pitlamping on North Pender Island, were fined $500 each by Magistrate A. G. Birch.

Their alternative is a 60-day jail term.

The men were arrested Nov. 17 by RCMP and game department officials. According to evidence, rifles and lights were found in their car.

City Swedes Enact Age-Old Ceremony

An age-old Swedish ceremony depicting the approach of light after the long, dark days of winter was enacted here Thursday night at a Swedish gathering in the home of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Nilsson, 1017 Catherine Street.

Central figure was Ingrid Anderson, a recent arrival from Sweden, who took the part of St. Lucia and served the traditional coffee and St. Lucia cake.

The ceremony honors St. Lucia, who was martyred by the Roman emperor Diocletian in 304 A.D.

For centuries in Sweden it fell to the eldest daughter of each family to rise early December 13, and don a long, white gown with a red sash, symbolic of blood lost by the martyr.

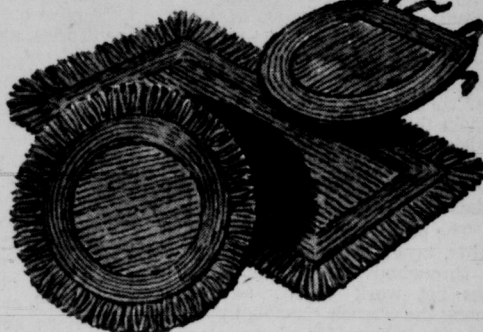

On her head she wore a golden crown bearing lighted candles, and served other members of the family while singing the hymn "Santa Lucia".

Those attending the ceremony here were members of the Swedish Club of Victoria.

The crown had been brought from Sweden by Mrs. Nilsson.

Will you really enjoy your retirement... or barely scrape along?

You have probably given a lot of thought to how you would like to spend your time after retirement... maybe you have even figured how much income you would need to do the things you want.

Is the amount you can presently count on enough? Think how much peace of mind an extra $100 a month would contribute!

The question is: "Where is this extra $100 coming from?" Maybe you expect to save it. If so, it would take $30,000, invested safely at 4%, to provide a gross income of $100 monthly. Few people have the means to do this.

However, there is a simple, safe and sure way of providing for extra retirement income—a Metropolitan Retirement Program. This also provides Life insurance protection for your family in case something should happen to you before retirement. The cash and loan values in the policy can be used as nest eggs in the event of unforeseen contingencies.

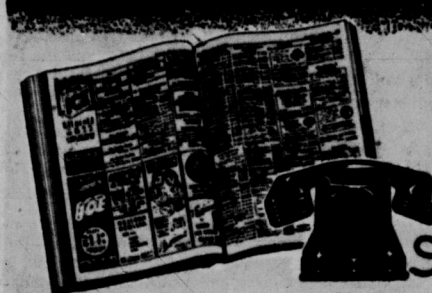

Your Metropolitan Representative will show you how, step by step, you can provide for financial security during your retirement years. He will help you review the possible income from your present policies in the light of your future retirement plans and needs. You might also ask him about a Family Income rider to give added protection to your family.

Any Metropolitan Representative will welcome this chance to show that Metropolitan service is as local as Main Street... as close as your phone

Mr. Diefenbaker's Task

THE CONSERVATIVE PARTY, as expected, has chosen Mr. John Diefenbaker for its new leader and in doing so has selected a man of ability whose major contribution to Canadian public life may be the restoration, in large part, of the two-party system of government.

With optimism suitable to the occasion, the distinguished parliamentarian from Saskatchewan has expressed the belief that enough popular votes can be swung to his party to win the next election. The sharp division within the Conservative convention itself discounts that hope. Quebec does not like Mr. Diefenbaker.

The position he has taken on civil rights, broadly applauded as it may be throughout the rest of Canada, does not work to his advantage among the French Canadian population for whom Mr. Leon Balcer, president of the National Conservative Association, spoke.

That is the handicap under which he steps into his new role—a handicap which this able veteran of public life appreciates and will fight.

Despite that impediment, however, Mr. Diefenbaker doubtless stands as the Conservative best suited to secure a maximum vote throughout the country and to start his party on the march out of the wilderness.

It is greatly to be hoped that under him the Progressive Conservative Party will grow in strength, regaining a position in which it provides an effective alternative to the Liberal administration, and thereby restoring the benefits of the two-party system.

Because Social Credit and the CCF have only sectional followings, the Tories alone can provide that national choice.

While the handicap of a Quebec hostile to the new leader is recognized, it would have beneficial results for Canada if the Conservatives could intensify their work in that province and break the one-party allegiance which creates the undesirable background of racial division in this country's politics.

Mr. Diefenbaker has big problems before him. He need not, however, feel himself bound by the contradictions and impossible promises of the convention platform. He has been overwhelmingly endorsed by the Conservative Party and should feel free, with his colleagues in the Commons, to make a real policy in the light of events.

A distinguished Canadian and westerner has been chosen to succeed Mr. Drew—a successor intimately familiar with the parliamentary processes by which the former leader did much to regain public respect for the party. Canadians of different political persuasions will wish him well in the tasks ahead.

Russia's Move Next

IN CONDEMNING RUSSIAN military intervention in Hungary and demanding immediate withdrawal of Soviet troops from that country, the United Nations has set a precedent. It was the first time a U.N. member had ever been so sternly admonished. It will also in all probability prove to be the first time a country so condemned has refused to heed the United Nations demand.

Russia will balance the adverse effects of ignoring a U.N. resolution, against the almost certain loss of Hungary as a satellite if the Red Army goes home. The answer should not be in doubt.

At the same time, Moscow cannot flout the U.N. without paying for it. For the moment the cost may be intangible—a loss of prestige, particularly among the neutral Asian nations; a consolidation of world opinion against the current harsh measures in Hungary.

But more concrete steps could follow continued rejection of United Nations authority. There is weight to majority world opinion as expressed through the U.N. Assembly. Britain and France, despite their desire to complete their Egyptian campaign, were quick to acknowledge U.N. authority and jurisdiction when the Assembly called for their withdrawal from the Suez.

Already two U.S. delegates to the United Nations have proposed that diplomatic and economic sanctions be imposed if Russia fails to comply. It is not likely that the U.N. will go so far as to imperil world peace, but it is important that the prestige of the global body be preserved; the U.N. must not be allowed to become merely a debating group that can be spurned with impunity.

'Mr. Nanaimo' Wins

WHEREVER MEN KNOW OF the good works of others in their different communities on Vancouver Island, Pete Maffeo has taken on the character of "Mr. Nanaimo."

The voters of that city made it official Thursday with a resounding endorsement of his candidacy for mayor.

In the encouragement of good clean sport, in countless other activities for the community benefit, Pete Maffeo has been a tireless worker. He has been the unofficial liaison between his home town and organizations elsewhere on the Island. Now his duties become formal and a host of friends north and south wish him well.

Good luck to you in your new job, Pete. Or should we phrase it more correctly? Congratulations to Your Worship-elect.

Mr. Molotov Seeks to Inspire the Arts

Toronto Globe and Mail

FOR three centuries' worth of reasons, Ben Jonson never heard of Mr. Molotov, but he read the Old Bolshevik's mind as truly as though he were a contemporary. Jonson proclaimed the entitlement of art to be but art, unadorned by the artificers of the creative work of our artists.

He means no such thing, of course. Probably the smartest thing Whistler ever said was that "all art should be in the service of life." And when Pope wrote that "all nature is but art, unadorned by the artificers of the creative work of our artists," he was saying that nature serves no mistress save herself, a text our own artists, as well as the Russians, might paste in their studios.

And that covers a wide field, for art, in the generous allowances of the English language, can mean anything from perfect workmanship at the bench to a trick of human conduct, or from a branch of learning to those peculiar and usually self-conscious pursuits which are watched over by the Muses—the group Mr. Molotov has in mind.

The true artists of this century are probably the physicists, peering into the forever unseeable smallness of the atom—not because they created the mathematical formulae for measuring its nucleus and charting the behavior of its protons, neutrons and electrons.

But Muse or mathematician, with brush or stylus or equation, the artists

Thanks for the Trucks

The Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce wish to express their sincere thanks and appreciation to the many companies, the navy, and the army who provided trucks and men in answer to our appeal for assistance in evacuating the people and household effects from the flooded zone of the Doncaster-Oakland area Sunday, Dec. 9.

It is realized by this organization that without the full cooperation of the citizens of this area, many families would have suffered considerable losses.

Apathy

In support of Mr. Scott's letter of Dec. 11, I too am puzzled as to why the idea of a garbage pulverizer was buried, when, according to information, it would save the taxpayer of this city a large amount of money, besides providing the city of Victoria free fertilizer for our parks, etc.

The only answer to the question involved is general apathy by our citizens. Just recently a public meeting was called to discuss the trades licensing fees. Mr. Don Smith has gone to a lot of trouble to ascertain what the city would gain by investigating that source of taxation and at that meeting there happened to be 12 speakers and 35 persons as an audience.

What seems to me to be the only things that would arouse the interest of the people of Victoria would be the presence of Marilyn Monroe, Elvis Presley, bingo or an atomic bomb.

Appreciated

May I take this opportunity of thanking all those persons and the Esquimalt police who assisted in the search for Christopher Zirlo, who wandered away from his home on Dec. 11.

Also all those who helped to avert the flooding of homes during heavy rain of Saturday and Sunday.

The Esquimalt community is very grateful to the naval and military personnel who assisted us on both occasions and to CJVI for the efficient operation of their mobile unit, and the help of the Lions Club in the first instance.

We should also say well done Jimmy Palmer.

Idiot or Commie?

It seems either an idiot or a pro-communist is again in charge of your correspondence.

I answered a recent letter in the Times which fairly reeked with Communist propaganda. But my letter was never published, no doubt because I stated some plain truths about communism and also about labor unions which are almost as bad.

This kind of behavior doesn't make sense, especially by a newspaper that professes to be anti-Communist.

However, according to the signs of the times it may not be too long till these and other evils will no longer rule the world. In the meantime I would advise all those who are partial to communism to take a trip to Hungary and see how it works. Then perhaps they might show a little more appreciation to those who are trying to expose it.

All in Clover

The improvement of Dallas Road is just about complete and Clover Point is being made into a very fine parking view. Clover Point is a very important historical point close to the city. Here James Douglas landed and anchored the little HBC steamer, The Beaver, and marched into Victoria to found Fort Victoria in 1843.

The point was called Clover Point because the whole promontory was covered with clover. Now, as a historical point, why not, instead of planting grass, say from Moss Street to the point, plant just clover with a stone cairn telling of the landing.

There is more interest in the swims from Victoria to Port Angeles and Port Angeles to Victoria than most people imagine, particularly among visitors. Could not a lot of cairns be erected from stones from the beach—a big one for Marilyn Bell and Cliff Lumsdon, and smaller ones for those who tried, and how many times? Or the cairn they propose for Marilyn and the dates and names of those who competed alongside of it. The tallest totem pole, such a point of interest for us sightseers, would be close at hand.

Winter Shelter

WHEN WE WERE VERY YOUNG

Where Trees Grew Instead of Subdivisions

OUT Beyond Smith's Hill there lay a beautiful, quiet woody valley through which there meandered a crystal-clear little stream that cut across Cedar Hill Road to join Bowker Creek. This, of course, was in the spacious era when floods were as foreign to Victoria as to Mount Ararat largely because the many small streams flowing through its lowlands were able to make their various ways to the sea without hindrance of modern subdivisions. This little dale north of Smith's Hill was a perfect hunting ground for Christmas trees so naturally it became our objective on about the second Saturday before the wonderful holiday.

It was a considerable expedition and we set out armed with axes and equipped with bulging lunches that always seemed to get themselves eaten far too soon and long before it was time to set out for home again.

The expedition, besides being dedicated to garnering the most symmetrical and perfect little balsams for ourselves usually had also a lucrative angle. Almost always a neighbor or two had asked us to get trees and we would collect a nickel or a dime and sometimes a quarter.

There were two ways to reach the valley; one by mounting to the top of Cook Street where it pierced out among rocks and oaks; the other by following Cedar Hill Road to Raper's dairy farm and sloshing through a swampy meadow behind the pastures. In this way we paced the little stream as it wound in and out through an early winter wonderland.

In a very short time we were out of sight of any habitation; it was as though we had gone miles into the country and the only sound, except for the occasional lowing of a distant cow, was the chatter and laughter of the little river.

And on the verges of the stream were natural open glades because this was an oak country and not the thickets of firs for which we were slowly heading. In these open spaces were rain pools, still and lovely, inviting one to linger and play. And there was the indescribably beautiful wet smell of earth and dying leaves.

It was impossible to hurry; everything seemed to cling to our reluctant feet and argue delay—time was of no importance anyway—and impromptu games simply suggested themselves.

Sometimes we would build little dams across the stream and make docks out of stones and sticks to harbor fleets of the more sturdy leaves that would come dancing along the flowing surface of the water.

Nothing more was needed; we were free and the world was wonderful, beckoning us to new and vast adventures in the valley.

And there were adventures enough because the valley was stocked with all sorts of wild game; huge bears hid behind outcrops of rocks; tigers and lions prowled the oak copses; great boa constrictors, ignorant of this latitude, lay coiled ready to crush us to death.

But we feared none of them. The heavy calibre elephant guns in our hands were at the ready and we stalked the glades as silently as Indians, squishing almost in deadly quiet, through the pools and the stream.

Suddenly we were hungry with the all-prevailing hunger that only healthy boys can know. Somehow we would get a little fire going in one of the many natural fireplaces in the big rocks and by its smoky cheer wolf down jam sandwiches and doughnuts.

Then, of course, it would come to us that we had really started out to get Christmas trees and the best place for them was on the slopes of the fine hill at the Cedar Hill Crossroad. I think the hill is called Christmas Hill.

It was always a slow walk up the slopes and now the woods changed as we entered the thicker fir stands and soon our hands were sticky with balsam gum from squashing the little nodules on the bark.

Our hunt axes soon hewed down a half-dozen perfect little Christmas trees and we headed homeward, filled with a deep satisfaction of a day well spent, and our hearts filled with the hope of catching a ride on some grocery delivery wagon returning to town from distributing groceries around Gordon Head and Cedar Hill.

What if Hungarian Resistance Continues?

IT now begins to seem that the brutal intervention of the Red Army by no means ended the Hungarian story. Instead, it seems possible that an effective, nationwide guerrilla movement will be organized there. And if the astonishing Hungarians succeed in organizing such a movement, the West as well as the Soviets will be faced with an apallingly difficult decision. For if the Hungarian revolt had been no more than a flash in the pan, quickly and easily suppressed, mere words would have been enough. But if the resistance continues, the United States and its allies are going to have to decide what, if anything, to do about it.

The Hungarians appear to be brilliantly turning Soviet techniques against the Soviets. For the Soviets, unlike the American military, take guerrilla action very seriously indeed as a technique of warfare.

When he was War Minister under Stalin, Soviet Premier Bulganin boasted that the Soviet Union possessed "an entire novel doctrine of warfare" which would permit the Kremlin to gain its ends "without resort to regular army warfare." The "novel doctrine" was, of course, based on guerrilla tactics.

The doctrine has worked well for the Communists. Communist guerrillas have harried Western positions from Malaya to Greece. And at least three Communist guerrilla leaders—Tito of Yugoslavia, Ho Chi Minh of Indo-China, and Mao Tse Tung of China—have fought their way to full power.

In a remarkable treatise on guerrilla warfare, Mao Tse Tung has laid down the requirements for effective guerrilla action. One is the support of the mass of the people.

"Guerrillas are like fish," Mao wrote, "and the people are the water in which the fish swim. If the temperature of the water is right the fish will multiply and flourish."

The temperature of the water is wholly right in Hungary—the bitter Hungarians hate the Soviet conquerors to a man. But guerrillas need arms as well as hate.

The Hungarian resistance now has considerable stocks of weapons, since about three-quarters of the Hungarian army went over to the rebels. For the time being—but only for the time being—it is believed here, the Hungarians have enough weapons to mount effective guerrilla operations.

If they do so, the Soviets can adopt either of two tactics. They can, if they will, make a Carthaginian peace, in effect destroying Hungary as a nation. But they cannot half-destroy Hungary.

A tactic of limited frightfulness is the worst way to deal with guerrillas, as the Nazis discovered. Such isolated acts of frightfulness as the murder of all the inhabitants of the village of Oradour-Sur-Glane, for example, and the deportation of only a few hundreds of thousands of Frenchmen to Germany, greatly strengthened the French wartime resistance.

There are obvious reasons why the Soviets may hesitate to adopt a tactic of total frightfulness.

The alternative is the policy which the Germans in the end adopted throughout the German wartime empire: It is to try to hold only the larger cities and the main lines of communication, relying on forays into the guerrilla-held countryside to wear down and eventually destroy the resistance.

This policy did not work for the Germans because the allies air-dropped tons of supplies to the anti-Nazi resistance. But it unquestionably will ultimately work for the Russians, if the Hungarian resistance is not likewise supplied. And this is why the prospect of a continuing Hungarian resistance may confront the West with an appalling choice.

For, if an effective Hungarian resistance movement is established, its leaders will surely ask the United Nations, which has already condemned and declared illegal the Soviet action in Hungary, for assistance. Assistance cannot possibly be supplied covertly.

One expert guess is that it would take 150 aircraft sorties a month, and an elaborate logistic system, to supply a serious guerrilla force in Hungary. And any such operation would obviously involve, among other risks, the risk of world war. The alternative is to stand idly by while the Soviets grind the Hungarian resistance slowly into bits. No doubt standing idly by is sometimes the better part of wisdom. But it may be as unpleasant as disregarding the cries of a small animal caught in a trap, while it is worried to death by a large one. At the very least, the Soviets should not be assured (as Secretary Dulles assured them when Poland exploded) that we will never in any circumstances do anything at all but talk.

Patriarch of the Forest

(From Harmac News)

SIXTY YEARS ago or so before King Alfred the Great gained immortality for burning his landlady's cakes, a tree came to life far away in the dense forests of Vancouver Island. A hardy Douglas fir, it was destined to survive more than 50 monarchs and even today part of the old tree remains, providing interest and a lesson in history for visitors to the MacMillan and Bloedel Research Building from all parts of the world.

When the 1,100-year-old giant of the woods was felled to be made into lumber in 1949, a study by company foresters of the annual growth rings revealed that the tree was remarkable not so much for its size, but for its great age. "Born 809 A.D. near Deep Lake, north of Alberni. Died (from unnatural causes) 1949." That is how its epitaph might read.

A typical section of the log was preserved. More than four feet six inches in diameter it now stands in the entrance of the Research Building and is becoming one of the most photographed exhibits in this part of B.C.

There are 17 plaques attached to a cross-section of the log which together form a fascinating little history lesson. The visitor sees, for example, that when Alfred was crowned King of England in 871 A.D. the tree was only about eight inches in diameter. It measured 22 inches across at the signing of Magna Carta by King John (1215); 11 more had been added when Columbus discovered America in 1492; and the robust old Douglas-fir had grown to a diameter of about 50 inches at the time of Confederation in Canada (1867).

Glancing almost with reverence at the imposing remains of this patriarch of the forest one cannot help recalling Robert Louis Stevenson's tribute to an old and well-beloved tree:

"...taller than many spires, more stately than the greater part of mountains, and yet a living thing, liable to sickness and death, like you and me; is not that in itself a speaking lesson in history?"

Purely Autobiographical

The odd query as to the identity of Silenus has reached my pointed ears. Ever ready to magnify a modest gaggle of readers into an enthusiastic multitude (as is the way with columnists down whose necks the hot breath of publishers is always puffing) I bend at once to the demands of the cheering crowds.

But first a word of regret at the lack of even the merest morsel of classical learnings which these queries evince. To the submerged tenth their souls who still, to health, read and enjoy the ancient glories of the Age of Civilization, what follows will very properly be regarded as superfluous. But you, my friends, are a small minority; which is a misfortune.

Let it be known, then that I am a demigod, born on the lovely island of Lesbos, son of the great god Jan. To the vile calamity that my father was Hermes, I beg of you to pay no attention; it is simply a rumor circulated by some zealot of Apollo for the purpose of discrediting me as a musician.

My old man
Was Pan
Who was my mother?
Ask me another.

This was quite a common situation in divine circles when I was young. The ancient female (or female ancient, if you prefer), knew her place, and never dreamed of bothering her gentlemen friends with obstetrical consequences.

But I digress. As the son of the great god of earth, I grew up in close contact with his friends and dependents: Fauns, Satyrs and all the wild creatures were my childhood companions. To this day I never go anywhere without my pet panther, a beast to whom, in fact, I am distantly related.

From my father I inherited a love, and if I do say so, a talent for music, as well as a predilection for sleep. Sleeping particularly in some bosky dell beside a running stream, is one of the great enjoyments of my life. There is no finer occupation for a sunny afternoon, and I recommend the practice to all young men. From his friends the Satyrs

I learned the delights of wine, that benevolent elixir of the Age of Gold when Father Saturn ruled the gods.

And it is this mild addiction to the wine-skin which has forever injured my reputation. History, the malicious Muse, has ever depicted me as the arch-drunkard, an imputation I most strongly resent. Nothing could be further from the truth. Was it not because of my temperate habits that Father Zeus selected me to be the tutor of his son Dionysus, whom the Romans call Bacchus?

Now there was a lad! Not only was he the god of wine (and some remarkable fine vintages he produced in his time) but he was an incurable practical joker. I fear my position as tutor soon degenerated into that of straight man. But withal we got along well together, though his jokes played my every moment.

I remember (how could I ever forget?) our journey of conquest into India. One evening we were resting in our pavilion by the Indus, sampling the local product (inferior, by the way) and discussing the future, as we often did. It always fascinated me to hear my young god discoursing of things to come, and that night he was telling of those who would come after him to India, Alexander of Macedon, the Parthian archers, the Moguls, Lawrence, Lillithgow and Chakravarti Rajagopalachari, whom all men called C.R. Fascinated, I longed for the prophetic gift, and like a fool, said so.

"My dear old friend, you shall have it! I can deny you nothing!" and forthwith he arranged matters with the Olympians by means of the appropriate libations. O, that mischievous boy! Never trust the joking gods, my friends, their every gift has strings attached.

I obtained the gift of prophecy right enough. But only under certain conditions, which were only too clearly revealed in my first peep into the future. I could prophecy, right enough, but only when woken from sleep by some blundering mortal.

I haven't had a decent snooze for centuries, and eternity stretches before me, an eternity of being rudely snatched from slumber. Were it not for the shelter granted me by this kindly newspaper, where nobody is interested in the future, Silenus would still be an insomniac wanderer among the vineyards.

(Watch closely for another fascinating instalment.)

UN CORRESPONDENT

By CHARLES LYNCH

The Future of UNEF

UNITED NATIONS—Canada, along with the United States and many other nations, is pressing for a start to be made on long-range settlements in the Middle East.

In his policy speech during the Assembly's general debate, Hon. Roch Pinard, minister of state and vice-chairman of the Canadian delegation, said the momentum of recent events should be harnessed to seek long-range settlements, but it could be used as the starting point for more lasting solutions.

It remains to be seen whether or not this will be possible. At present it seems rather doubtful, especially as UNEF is about to become the focal point for a whole series of new hassles over where it should be stationed, what its duties should be, and who is going to pay its bills.

The two countries most directly concerned in long-range settlements are Egypt and Israel and to get an insight into their feelings we have interviewed the foreign ministers of both countries—Dr. Mahmoud Fawzi of Egypt and Mrs. Golda Meir of Israel. Their views are diametrically opposed on almost every aspect of the situation, and obviously it is going to take extreme genius or extreme pressure to bring them any closer together.

We asked Dr. Fawzi how long Egypt feels that the United Nations Emergency Force should remain on Egyptian soil. His reply: "Only as long as this crisis endures, and as short a time as possible."

Question: "Should the force, in Egypt's opinion, be stationed along the Suez Canal for any period of time?"

Answer: "No, it should not; and the minute the British and French forces pull out from that area, there is no function any longer."

Question: "And where should the force be stationed after withdrawal is completed?"

Answer: "For a while near the demarcation line between Israel and Egypt. The presence of these forces is only related to the present crisis. They are not there to resolve the Palestine question or any other question."

We asked similar questions of Mrs. Meir. On the question of where UNEF should be stationed, she said: "We believe they should be stationed in the Sinai Desert, so that there will not be recreated the situation that was between us and Egypt before the 29th of October."

Question: "Then do you think the United Nations Emergency Force should remain in being until there is a peace settlement between Israel and Egypt?"

Answer: "No doubt."

Asked how long that might be, she replied: "As far as Israel is concerned, it can be 24 hours, and it may be less, but it seems to me that that is the great concern now of the United Nations."

Question: "Would Israel tolerate the presence of Egyptian troops in the Sinai Peninsula again?"

Answer: "We think that the United Nations should not tolerate Egyptian troops, should not make it possible for Egyptian troops to come back to the Sinai, until there is a peace settlement."

We put to both foreign ministers the question: "Can you conceive of a situation in which there could be normal relations between Egypt and Israel?"

Mrs. Meir replied: "There is no doubt about it. We have always held the idea that there can, and should, be peace between Israel and its Arab neighbors, and we are still convinced that it is necessary and possible."

Dr. Fawzi's answer was: "I can conceive of a situation in which the rights of the Arab people will be really and fully recognized. Let anyone come and tell me in which form that can be done, and he will find me perfectly in agreement with him."

We followed that up by asking Mrs. Meir what part Israel was prepared to play in solving the Palestine Arab refugee problem.

Her reply: "We are prepared to help plan the resettlement of the Arab refugees. We have always said that, within a peace settlement, we naturally would be prepared to pay for the property that was left behind by the Arabs who have fled from the country and are now among the refugees."

Snow Clearing

COMOX DISTRICT FREE PRESS—It was fortunate that the snow which fell last week was cleared in short order by the rain but next time we may not be so lucky.

It is true that snow was cleared off the roads by city crews, but what of that which lay in the gutters? The roads were made passable for motorists, but the poor pedestrian wasn't so lucky.

No effort was made to clear the melting snow from the sides of the roads and it seemed that the city was again waiting for the rain to do the job which the taxpayers expect to be done out of a snow-clearing fund or out of general revenue. The rain is a cheap laborer, but not a very reliable one.

Snow clearing should be done as quickly as possible. We should not have to wait until the rain takes it own good time.

Scouting Service

COWICHAN LEADER—Some regret is felt at the departure of Lt. Col. T. V. Sandys-Wunsch from the helm of Duncan-Chemainus District Boy Scout Association. He has decided to retire from active participation in Scouting after a busy 10 years most of which were spent as district president.

Col. Sandys-Wunsch brought with him excellent capabilities for taking up the direction of Scouting as a retirement venture. He is a man of the outdoors, a man of the northland, servant of a renowned force, and official of the RCMP in whom discipline and fairness found a happy blend. Duncan-Chemainus district has been fortunate to have had his services, freely given, during the past decade.

In paying this tribute to the colonel, successor to another celebrated Scouting colonel still with us, Col. M. E. Dopping-Hepenstall, honorary district commissioner, may we extend a welcome to Mr. John S. Lawrence, who succeeds Col. Sandys-Wunsch in office.

Logger Breaks Leg
As Log 'Kicks Back'

FRANKLIN RIVER—Sig Anderson was reported resting comfortably in the West Coast General Hospital, Port Alberni, Friday after sustaining a leg fracture while working in the woods.

Anderson had just completed bucking a log when it kicked back, pinning his leg against a rock. First aid men treated him on the spot, and he was later transferred to hospital via logger's bus and ambulance.

Debris Strewn
100 Miles
Along LakeshoreBig Clean-Up Starts
At Lower Campbell

CAMPBELL RIVER—B.C. Power Commission faces the task of clearing debris strewn by last weekend's storm along 100 miles of shoreline of Lower Campbell Lake.

Work is proceeding on rebuilding of a trestle washed out by a freshet in the storm and employees of one of the contractors on a huge earth dam being built for the commission between Upper and Lower Campbell Lakes are going to work in a bosun's chair.

Dawson, Wade & Macco, owners of the trestle that connected their concrete mix plant with installations on the other side of the river, expect to finish the trestle and resume work in about a week.

SMASHED WEIR

The freshet, close to a flash flood, caused debris to be swept from Buttle Lake and Upper Campbell Lake. It took out a weir at the foot of Upper Campbell Lake that was designed to increase water storage, wrecked the trestle, damaged the first few steel pilings of a permanent trestle and undermined the river bank to cause the loss of two compressors.

Other losses included 1,600 pounds of welding rod and a quantity of rigging stored by Dominion Bridge Co. in a shack that was washed away.

Blamed was 2.5 inches of rain that caused a sudden thaw of some 10 inches of snow.

A wind of 45 miles per hour, added to the weight of floating debris pressing against boomstick barriers struck across the outlets of the two lakes, smashed the barriers.

A third barrier across the river at Lower Campbell Lake also was ripped out, allowing the floating logs, boughs, stumps, and snags to drift freely over Lower Campbell Lake.

Dock Fire
Sea Does Rest

COURTENAY, B.C. (CP)—Volunteer firemen took the easier way out to half a fire that was licking at the abutments and pilings of the old Condors bridge. Mustering power saws, the fire crew dropped the bridge into the Puntledge River, thus dousing the flames.

Old School
Turned Over To Ladysmith

LADYSMITH—The city council has agreed to accept the old Market Square School building from the school board and consideration will now be given to finding some other use for it.

In a letter to the council, the school board said the building is no longer required for school purposes. The site is owned by the city.

Some time ago the school board offered the building to the city, but reserved the right to take it back if a sudden increase in enrollment made it necessary to use it again until more accommodation could be built. At that time the city decided not to accept it.

In 1954 the school board decided to stop using the building as a school when it was found the cost of renovating it to conform to the fire marshal's recommendations would be almost as much as the cost of providing equivalent classroom space in a new building.

It was closed as soon as the new Ladysmith Elementary School was ready for occupancy.

Logger Breaks Arm,
Leg, Ribs at Sooke

SOOKE—Frank Bowles, about 50, of Sooke, was reported in "fairly good" condition today at St. Joseph's Hospital, where he is being treated for fractures of the leg, arm and ribs, and possible concussion.

He was hurt Thursday at his work at Goodridge Sawmills Ltd. here, when he was hit by a 20-foot timber.

Qualicum Takes Over Airport
From Rotary Club

QUALICUM BEACH—A government order-in-council has given the village commissioner authority to take over the municipal airport from Qualicum Beach Rotary Club for a nominal payment of $10.

By-laws allocating grants of $2,500 toward the new health centre building, and $8,300 for development of municipally-owned beachfront property as a park, were given first reading.

H. L. Moulton has resigned as civil defence officer because of pressure of work. His successor will be appointed at the next commission meeting.

"The E & N Dayliner that operates between Victoria and Courtenay makes money," Mr. Bonner said. "We would like to see the same type of service between Parksville and Port Alberni."

"All it means is that we want the service that is rightfully ours under the terms of the original E & N Railway land grant," he said.

James Lythgoe
Funeral Held
At Chemainus

CHEMAINUS—Funeral services were held here Wednesday for James Lythgoe who died this week in Veterans' Hospital, Victoria.

He was born in Liverpool, England, in 1871. Coming to Canada, he located first at Regina, later moving to Parksville and then to Chemainus in 1944. A veteran of the First World War, he was a member of the Canadian Legion and the Regina Orange Lodge.

He is survived by one son, William, of Bloedel, near Campbell River, and a sister, Mrs. L. Lewis of England.

THE SOUNDING BOARD

Family Music-Making Encouraged By New Class at Music Festival

By AUDREY S.D. JOHNSON

Glancing over the Greater Victoria Music Festival syllabus for 1957, which came off the press this week, provision of an entirely new class caught my attention. It is an open class without age limits and is headed "Family Ensemble—any combination of instruments or voices, all performers to be relatives." This intriguing idea, combining with the present season of the year, set off a train of thought.

I suppose most people of my own generation, with the sound of carols ringing in our ears, nostalgically remember Christmases of our early youth, before they became principally an anxious time of counting pennies. When the family was a music-loving one, the group of friends and relatives happily playing and singing carols in the mellow glow of the Christmas tree and the yule-log fire, is a memory one would not trade for any glittering dreams of recollected glory.

Family musical ensembles were not uncommon at one time, but one does not hear so much of them since the advent of television and the advance of teen-age sophistication.

It is a form of music-for-fun that has a splendid tradition in musical history among the peoples of Europe. Out of such tradition came our Mozart, our Haydn, Schubert and Schumann.

Some of the greatest art and most superlative artists have developed out of this immensely satisfying and relaxing form of music-making.

It has given birth to lieder and to the lovely examples of small ensemble composition by the great masters. That is why I for one, welcome its inclusion in the festival program. Maybe there won't be a big response this time; or maybe the art is not as dormant as it appears to be. Or—and this is a bright thought indeed—possibly it flourishes among our new Canadian groups and can be lured into the open by this means.

At any rate I am certain that what the adjudicators will be seeking, is not a polished, technically slick performance, so much as one that is obviously from the heart and giving as much sheer happiness to the performers as it will—invariably, in such a case—to the audience.

And whatever the case proves to be next spring, congratulations to the syllabus committee. I hope the class is there to stay.

RECORD SHOP

Choice Selections For Musical Minds

By HUMPHRY DAVY

As records, like books, have become popular, Christmas gifts, we will relax this week to review some of the best discs issued during the year. The list of discs reviewed is far from complete, but the music, classical or otherwise, is of a type which the average person will enjoy.

One point I would like to make. If you know your records you will get more value for your money. As an example, there may be five of Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, but only one of these may be near perfection in performance and in sound. The serious discophile knows this, and is as choosy as a woman seeking a new hat.

First let's start with oratorios. Topping the list in my opinion is Handel's "Solomon" (Angel). This is a new release and the first recording of this great work performed by the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra. Beecham Choral Society, with Sir Thomas Beecham, conducting. A sidelight on this performance: the soprano is Lois Marshall, a Canadian singer from Toronto. She was specially chosen by Sir Thomas for the role of Queen of Sheba. This album has made her famous in England. You will be hearing more of her next year.

As an alternative, Haydn's "Creation" (Decca), which was reviewed earlier this year.

Now let's swing for a moment to "pops" or lighter music. The musical show "My Fair Lady" with original cast (Columbia) is one of the top hits of the year. Also any of Percy Faith's new discs, such as "Swing Low in Hi-Fi," makes good listening and are well recorded.

A new pop release which is tops in its class is "With Love from Paris" (Angel), featuring 12 songs by famous Paris night club artists with Les Compagnons de la Chanson. If you are fond of light-hearted German songs, there is a fine Vanguard release, "German University Songs."

Returning to the classics. One of the most magnificent performances of Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 "Eroica" appeared this year on an Angel label. It is performed by the Philharmonic Orchestra with Otto Klemperer conducting. Another top choice is Sibelius' Symphony No. 3 and Violin Concerto with David Oistrakh, violinist (Angel).

Columbia issued a fine recording of Lalo's Symphonie Espagnole and Bruch's Concerto No. 1. Isaac Stern, violinist, on this disc gives a fine performance of these two works.

Some other excellent releases are: Sir Adrian Boult conducting the Philharmonic Promenade Orchestra in Suppé overtures (Westminster label); Scriabin's Sonata No. 3 for piano and Preludes, Horowitz (Victor); Serenades for Strings, Boyd Neel Orchestra, with Cedric Dumont conducting (Epic); Mozart Piano Concertos Nos. 21 and 25, Maria Tipo, soloist—

HANS GRUBER CONDUCTS

This Symphony Pair Cuts the Long Hair

Time was when we were told from various quarters that our symphony programs were too "heavy." I was non-plussed and have tried ever since to determine just what was meant by that kindly criticism, in order that we might try to correct that implied deficiency, if we could. I may not yet be on the right track, but I take it, meanwhile, that the word "heavy" may mean "unfamiliar," "lacking in humor," among other possible interpretations.

Accordingly, we have, for once, planned a pair of "concerts" for tomorrow afternoon and Monday evening the like of which have never been "seen" here. The quotation marks in the previous sentence may give you a clue as to what you will be in for. To call them concerts is to use a misnomer, to say the least, "seen," rather than "heard," is also used advisedly.

For what you will receive tomorrow and Monday—thankfully or otherwise—I personally disclaim both credit and blame.

Hans Gruber is also used advisedly.

'CHRIST WAS BORN ON CHRISTMAS DAY'

Adoration of the Child, Jesus, is portrayed at climax of the moving drama of the Nativity, an annual presentation by St. Barnabas' Church. Arranged as an act of worship, it takes place within the church nightly, Tuesday to Friday, of next week. It is customary for the players in the pageant to preserve anonymity.

TWO FOR THE SHOW

By PHIL LEE

A (Don't Miss) B (For Rainy Days) C (To Put in Time)

(B) "HOT ROD GIRL" (Capitol) Tall on talk and short on action, American-International's "Hot Rod Girl" is nonetheless an interesting film for the younger set, pointing up the dangers involved in racing souped-up jalopies on city streets and plumping for police-patrolled drag strips.

Like most shows featuring such immature actors as Lori Nelson, John Smith and Chuck Connors, the sermon is over-sweet and the sad scenes are as over-drawn as "East Lynne" or "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The eyes glance right, the eyes glance left, teeth flash, laughter is hearty, a dimpled moue, a leer, a sneer, pain, surprise, fear, arrogance are all moods culled directly from the "Handbook for Amateur Actors" and are about as subtle as a snowball in the back of the neck.

Nor is there anything new in the plot. There is the teen-age, coke-drinking, leather-jacketed gang whose god is Speed and Devil Sense. Their talk keeps tempo with their music which sounds not unlike a Hottentot reciting excerpts from Omar Khayyam backwards.

There is the good element who goes along with the good cop. There is the bad element represented by one creep. Translated, this means that John Smith is hit hard after his younger brother has been challenged and killed by another hot-rodder. He leaves the old gang and concentrates on being a mechanic, even shunning his gal Lori.

This makes things difficult for Chuck Connors, the understanding policeman, who believes in the kids and backs up a much-criticized speedway. For without Smith, acknowledged leader of the gang, the authorized strip idea loses appeal and the teen-agers take their jalopies out on the street again. Second half of the Capitol's bill is "Girls in Prison."

Carol Fantasy To Be Sung Tuesday

A lovely fantasy of old carols, arranged by Gustave Holst, under the title, "Christmas Day," will be one of the highlights of the ninth annual "Carols by Candlelight" concert at First United Church, Tuesday.

This number is one of those to be sung by the choir directed by Mrs. Roberto Wood. Assisting will be soloists Joyce Hunt, Alice Waddell, Allan Husband, Paul Wharf and Roberto Wood.

Community carol singing will take place from 8 to 8.15, when the scheduled program will commence.

The second American tour of the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra, under Herbert von Karajan, will open in Washington, D.C., on Oct. 7, according to the Berlin Tourist Office. Between then and Nov. 19, when they play their final concert in Santa Barbara, the orchestra will have played 30 more concerts in the United States and Canada.

A CARD OF THANKS
To all those good people, tradesmen, suppliers and their management... I wish to extend sincere congratulations on the fine work they have done in assisting me over the months in the construction and layout of Norman's Restaurant. This fine establishment is the ultimate result of their labors and engineering.
Norman's Restaurant, located at 769 Fort St. (between Lillian West and Clearview Bakeries) is now open for business, serving breakfast, luncheon, dinners and afternoon teas. The Autumn Room (located upstairs) which was specifically designed for private parties, has a seating capacity of about 30, containing an atmosphere of quiet so acceptable to such occasions.
Lack of space makes it impossible to describe Norman's in detail. I can only say to come and see for yourself one of Vancouver Island's finer eating establishments.
Yours sincerely,

Intimate Account Of Arctic Life

ARCTIC BRIDE, by Wanda Tolboom. Ryerson Press, Toronto. 256 pages. $4.50.

The spell of the Arctic has inspired a number of authors, particularly women, to put their experiences in print and through them all runs a note of nostalgia despite the rugged lives they have led in the Far North.

Latest to do so is Wanda Tolboom, a Manitoba school teacher who went North to wed the Hudson's Bay Company post manager of Povungnetuk. The author in "Arctic Bride" tells of her first two years of life among the Eskimos.

After a year or two in the outside world the lure of the Arctic drew them back again, this time with a young daughter and a baby son.

"They were good years and happy years because they were Arctic years." She writes now but explains this time there is no looking back. Their little daughter is of school age and the Eskimo friends she loved must be forgotten and left behind.

WELL ILLUSTRATED

Nearly 30 photographic illustrations add interest to the story of the life of the young couple where their nearest white neighbors were 100 miles away. Except for occasional visitors from the outside by plane or in the Hudson's Bay ship Nascope their only associates were Eskimos.

A rich fund of absorbing material is found by the observant and competent author in accounts of seal and whale hunts, Eskimo character and ways of life, exciting stories of motor boat trips through dangerous waters clogged with drifting ice-traveling by dog-sled to far-off posts and entertaining visitors from the outside.

It is an intimate, moving, hu-

WANDA TOLBOOM

'Modest' Artist's Zany Humor

MAX PRESENTS, by Giovanni. Toronto: Brett-Macmillan Ltd. pps. 127. $3.75.

The dust-jacket of this fabulous book of cartoons advises that it was "Conceived by Max, supervised by Max, selected by Max, arranged and edited by Max, and with commentary by Max."

Max, we take it, is the artist P. L. Giovannetti. In a wonderful foreword, he says: "This book is the result of my own fertile imagination, unflagging energy and genius for organization."

The cartoons—mostly "men, women and other animals"—are just as refreshingly zany. This would make an ideal Christmas gift for almost any member of the family.

PAINTERS' WORKSHOP By ROBERT SAVERY

Art of Cartoonist Satire on Humanity

It was first night of the revue. London's theatre season had just opened. All back stage had the usual hopes and fears for the show's acceptance.

Here and there groups of "flats" stacked in order cast deep shadows on the floor, cables from the tormentor batteries and spots twisted like snakes in the dim light as we picked our way toward the dressing rooms.

My companion, cartoonist H. M. Bateman, had an appointment with the celebrated George Grossmith who had come from retirement to add the lustre of his humorous sketches to the stage he had been familiar with many years earlier. Bateman was at that time contributing lively caricatures of celebrities to Tatler; excellent sketches in ink and wash showing, however, little of the work of preparation each involved.

Bateman worked on a hand-sized pad of charcoal paper with several pencils of varying tone values, and it was with these to produce distortions and deformations solely to present a penetrating analysis and widen the scope of his portrayal.

What is it that distinguishes the caricature from grotesque art? The answer undoubtedly is in its approach to the subject. Caricature stresses intentionally or otherwise the comical, doleful or ludicrous. Through its medium of boisterous exaggeration it castigates humanity for its weaknesses of form and actions.

When on its highest plane, as in the work of Daumier and the bitter accomplished drawings of Toulouse-Lautrec, it invites a tolerant mirth for these failings.

MARILYN MONROE

Materials he proposed to do a series of portrait sketches of Grossmith between acts for, he said, he liked to obtain his studies while the models retained the emotional sparkle and verve of their performance.

RAPID WORK

This was the writer's first contact with a great caricaturist and the method in which he worked. That evening Bateman produced several excellent portrait heads which would have brought credit to any portraitist. In fact one appeared on a gallery wall not long afterwards.

From these sketches the artist selected a side and three-quarter view and rapidly finished them with all the tonal values required to emphasize the character of his sitter. From these he later produced six sets of line drawings, as rapidly as if he was pulling proofs from a crucible of molten satire.

In each sketch the distortions became more pronounced. First the teeth were enlarged and their natural prominence exaggerated, then the thin nose was tilted upward and the rather pleasing smile became the artificial smirk of the theatrical "man about town."

So is a caricature born, the artist allowing his imagination to produce distortions and deformations solely to present a penetrating analysis and widen the scope of his portrayal.

Whether that opinion is justified or not, readers will find the book interesting reading if they have even a layman's acquaintance with the occult.

It purports to sketch certain broad principles of Lamaism, deals with the subject of perception beyond the physical, hypnotism, the Dalai Lama, reincarnation and those non-material elements which place Tibet and its people in their distinctive position in men's minds.

CONTRASTS Much in the story seems incredible to the westerner. Yet through it runs a thread of thought made familiar by accounts which have come from this theocratic state.

The reports of clairvoyance, the contrast between high ethical concepts and harsh physical life—even the assurance that there are yeti, or Abominable Snowmen—achieve a plausibility that is based on earlier accounts from other sources.

The writing is lucid, the discussion clear. If it does nothing else, "The Third Eye" presents ideas which provide a stimulating change from conventional western thought. That in itself makes the book useful reading.

THE THIRD EYE, by Lobsang Rampa. British Book Service. $3.75.

Secker & Warburg, publishers of "The Third Eye," the Autobiography of a Tibetan Lama, written under the pen-name T. Lobsang Rampa, preface the book with an interesting foreword.

In an effort to confirm material in the volume, they submitted the manuscript to 20 informed readers for independent opinions.

Those opinions differed on various sections of the book. But where one reader found an incident or practice beyond his credulity, it was accepted by others. They, in turn, held individual reservations on specific passages. There was no unanimity in dissent where dissent occurred.

"None the less," the foreword states, "the publishers believe that 'The Third Eye' is in its essence an authentic account of the upbringing and training of a Tibetan boy in his family and in a lamasery."

DEALS WITH OCCULT Whether that opinion is justified or not, readers will find the book interesting reading if they have even a layman's acquaintance with the occult.

JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

—in a word it is the clown in art.

This form of art has provided vast entertainment but never ascended to the plane of great art. However, it can become a powerful and dangerous tool, for by skillfully employing de-basement it can provoke utter contempt for the object or person lampooned.

Generally, its emotional response is shallow, brittle and diverting but short-lived from the standpoint of art.

Thought-Provoking Book Defies Nehru

With the pot boiling in the East, anything which leads Western understanding to the point where there is more sympathetic comprehension of what goes on in the Oriental mind becomes very important.

Almost central in whatever may happen in the East, stands India. Her attitude towards the recent Suez troubles has struck many Western minds as something akin to a sellout of the Commonwealth. But India has her own point of view; India has had her own appointment with destiny, and central in her development in modern times has been Gandhi's friend and confidant, the present prime minister of India, Jawaharlal Nehru.

By far the most comprehensive study of this amazing man, an astonishing combination of Western intellectual and Eastern mystic, is Frank Moraes' new biography, Jawaharlal Nehru. Moraes is an Indian journalist, friend and supporter of Nehru.

His work is undoubtedly free from any suspicion of objectivity. To him, Nehru is a hero and he treats his subject as such. Perhaps this is just as well at this moment in history because, whatever may be the book's failings, it does present a faithful account of India's attitude and Nehru's personality—and the two are at times almost indistinguishable.

Perhaps the most interesting point made by this book is Nehru's kinship with the masses of India, a relationship which is so mystical that it may well pass our comprehension. For Nehru draws his stimulation and guidance from mingling in the basic, physical sense, with the people.

SUPPORTED GHANDI

Son of a wealthy and aristocratic family, educated at Harrow and Oxford, one of the inner circle of Gandhi's supporters and now a prime minister who plays no favorites and has no close and trusted subordinates, Nehru is a mysterious, lonely political figure.

His compensation comes from the strange communion which he holds with the people. It is as if all the forces of Oriental mysticism had been put to work for political purposes, not in a fanatic sense, but closely controlled by a highly trained rational and intellectual mind.

This is a phenomenon often encountered in the realm of international affairs; it may yet become the prototype of the great statesman of today's shrunken world.

There is much more than this in the book. Indeed the detail of the 500-odd pages is at times staggering. It is valuable too. But most valuable and intriguing of all is the picture which emerges of a remarkable man, a man we need to understand today.

STAMP CORNER

By REG NAIRNE

Australian postal rates have been creeping upwards every few years, and a further boost has now come into effect. An extra 1/4d has been added to all letters, which is going to mean the dropping of several now unnecessary denominations and the addition of others. It is not unlikely that stocks on hand of the former category will be surcharged with new values to use them up.

The ordinary letter rate is now 4d instead of 3 1/2d (it was once 1d!) so stocks of this value, now printed in green, and showing a koala bear, will probably be superseded by a red stamp of the Queen's head design.

The 6 1/2d value is now unnecessary and a 7d will take its place. This is the new postage plus air-mail rate.

The foreign postage rate is now 8d instead of 7 1/2d, so this will give rise to a further substitution.

The postage-plus-registration fee will now be one shilling and a penny, so the one shilling-half penny stamp currently in use will give way to another new value.

An 8d postage due stamp is also foreseen.

The territories under Australian administration, Papua, New Guinea, and Norfolk Island, will have their rates increased in the same way—Thus 3 1/2d, 6 1/2d and 7 1/2d values will be superseded by 4d, 7d and 8d stamps.

Surcharges may be expected, here, too.

Defeating Depression

(As a special Christmas feature the Times is publishing a serialisation of the new book, "The Art of Real Happiness." Co-author is Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, whose book "The Power of Positive Thinking" was warmly received by Times readers. There will be 12 instalments.)

(Newly Revised and Enlarged)
By Norman Vincent Peale, DD, and Smiley Blanton, MD
CHAPTER 6

Depression is characterized by self-criticism and a deep sadness and futility; there may also be a marked anxiety.

A business executive came to the clinic for help because his life had become so utterly without meaning to him that he had just about stopped caring whether he lived or died. He had all the usual symptoms of depression: boredom, listlessness, and a sense of futility. His lack of interest pervaded every sphere of his existence. His friends, he said, brought him no pleasure. His business was a job, and nothing else, and he was cynical and hard. His attitude, in colloquial terms, was "Never give a sucker an even break." He drove as hard a bargain as he could and still kept within the bounds of his honesty. He was even indifferent to his wife and children.

This man thought he loved no one; he felt that no one loved him.

Without love there is bound to be a sense of insecurity and very little will to go on living. He had what we call a gray veil over his life, a most common form of mild but persistent depression. He was like an old, tired actor moving dispiritedly through his part.

TOOK REST CURE

Some time before, he had, on his physician's advice, taken a three months' rest cure in a hospital. He felt no better after it. Then he took a trip to Florida where he swam, went fishing and drove around in his car by himself. None of this did him any good. Then his physician suggested our clinic.

The clinic psychiatrist said to him, "Tell me, you live in the country, what do you do with your leisure time? Do you do any gardening, or golf, for instance?"

"Oh, a little golf every now and then. Just go through the motions."

"Hobbies? Interests?"

"I don't really care about anything, no."

"Your business?"

"It's all routine. I know what to do to keep it going and, frankly, I don't much care whether I lose money or make it."

"Are you religious?"

"No, it leaves me cold! I used to go to Sunday school, and I've been to church, but it doesn't mean a thing. To some people perhaps, not to me."

LOVELESS CHILDHOOD

The story of his childhood was, in certain important respects, an all too common one. Having been left an orphan when he was only six, he had been brought up by an aunt who was conscientious but rigid and unaffectionate in her attitude toward him. She sent him to school, gave him the material things he needed. But he never had from her the kind of warm, loving care that sustains the heart of a young child.

He soon set for himself a motto which he had never renounced: "Everyone for himself, and the devil take the hindmost." This had dominated, and spoiled, his whole life.

To help him make love a reality in his life, it was suggested that he take the time and trouble to do things with them that they enjoyed, although he would have to force himself to do so at first. And he was told to write down on a piece of paper all the fine qualities and desirable traits that he could see in them. He was to carry this paper around with him and study it, and add to it from time to time. Whenever he got to thinking and fretting about himself, he was to take out what he had written and reflect on it, instead of on himself.

As it turned out, this became an absorbing interest for him. He was an intelligent man and, to make his study complete, he decided to go and visit his associates in their homes, casually and as a friend. And as he put together more and more facts about them, writing it all down carefully in a notebook afterward, he would study these people's histories on his way into the city on the morning train. He would sit in the train reading over the names, visualizing the faces and thinking about them.

One day he found himself reflecting, "Bill's a great fellow. It's wonderful how he loves his little boy. That yarn he told me about making a boat for him was really touching."

LIFE CHANGED

That day, he told us, he suddenly realized that he had turned the corner. It became a habit for him to think in this new pattern. In enthusiasm he exclaimed one day, "where have I been all my life? Where have I been? I used to think people were dull stuffed shirts. How wrong I was! They're interesting! They're wonderful!" He was practising a most effective therapy, that of understanding others!

HELPING THE SHY

"When you go to the church club meeting," we went on, "look for the shy fellows. You can pick them! Usually you can identify them by the resistant way they approach a group. Attach yourself to one of these men, the one who looks the most shy. Find what interests him. Draw him out."

At first it was a kind of game with him, but a hard one because of his own reticence. Nevertheless, he liked it. Then soon he began to take his new friends to church services "to help them." He forgot about his recently uttered complaint, "religion leaves me cold," and he formed a different concept of God from the one he had once held. He was able at last to conceive of God as kindly and living, rather than harsh and punishing. And just as he was learning to love, and be loved by those around him, so he felt loved by God. It was a warm, enriching experience. A feeling of security gradually replaced the old, morbid cynicism. Eventually he gained a measure of confidence in himself and in his future; his depression is vanishing.

being needed in a definite, specific way by society. It is essential above all for them to learn that, as the instruments of a Higher Power, they have been put here on earth with a cause to serve and useful functions to perform.

The best way to sell an idea to a man is to get him to sell it to someone else. So we invited him to join the men's club at the church.

We said to him, "many men are shy and uncertain of themselves, fearful of letting themselves go. Often they appear to be haughty, or uninterested, or above the crowd! They are just trying to conceal a shy nature. We want you to help us to help them. Join the club and serve as a greeter."

"Me? A greeter?" He was startled, but in spite of himself pleased at the suggestion.

Denny Boyd

"I know the Shrine people are up against a lot of problems, but I couldn't see fit to let my players take part in a pre-season game. I would have to let them away from our own training camp for one or two weeks and we would run the risk of an injury that could wreck us for the whole season."

"Just imagine where we would be if Jackie Parker or Normie Kwong or Frankie Anderson was badly injured in an exhibition game before the season started!"

Saanich Water Line Completed in January

Completion of Saanich's $185,000 waterworks extension program is expected by about mid-January, six weeks behind schedule.

Contractors' crews are now working on the most difficult stretch, along Patricia Bay Highway to the municipal boundary, where mud from excessive rains and hazard from discourteous motorists slows progress.

Municipal engineer H. D. Dawson expects this portion to be finished by the end of December with the remainder wrapped up about two weeks later.

NO PENALTY

Deadline for the contract was Nov. 30, but the municipality is satisfied with progress to date. There was no penalty clause for late completion.

"In any installation of waterworks there's bound to be difficulties to contend with, and on top of the normal difficulties we've had the heaviest rain on record," Mr. Dawson said.

SPEEDERS BLAMED

"I don't think the public has anything to complain of. Many of the public—the unthinking, fast-driving public—could be held responsible for delay, if any," he thought.

Speed limit along the work area is 20 miles an hour and many cars speed through at 50, the engineer said.

BETWEEN TIMES By MONTE ROBERTS

I was saddened to learn of the demise of Collier's magazine, which died of an overdose of red ink despite an amazingly healthy circulation.

Collier's was 68 years old at the time of its death, so, I suppose, in a way, it had just about lived out its three-score-years-and-ten.

But it is sad, nevertheless, for we who knew it when. My own acquaintance with Collier's goes back something less than 30 years, when it was a weekly—rather skinny and undernourished in the back pages, but lively, at that.

At that time, of course, the price was five cents. And somewhere around that time Macfadden Publications launched Liberty, also a five-cent weekly, and the standard drug-store witticism was "Give me Liberty or give me Collier's."

I have a soft spot in my heart for Collier's for several reasons.

One of them was the early recognition given Damon Runyon. Whether or not it was the first magazine to publish Runyon, I don't know. But I do know he used to appear—not often enough, mind you—at frequent intervals.

Corey Ford and Alistair MacBain (with they were still a writing team) almost converted me to reading outdoor writing via the pages of Collier's. And Luke Short in those days was proving that the western story could be the frame for solid writing.

Incidentally, the issue of Collier's now on the stands features a reprint of one of Runyon's earliest hard-boiled sentimental. And also the first installment of a Luke Short serial, which will end I know not where.

But my fondest recollection of Collier's is this: From it I received my very first hard-written rejection.

As every beginning writer knows, it is easy to collect a printed rejection slip, which usually states: "This does not necessarily mean your work lacks merit," and actually means your stuff didn't get past the first reader.

But when the beginning writer receives his first written or individually typed rejection, containing constructive criticism, he knows he is on the way.

Thus you can imagine the great lift to my spirits which resulted from a HAND-WRITTEN rejection from this great national magazine.

I can remember it now, almost word for word: "This pseudo-Runyon effort is just about the worst I have ever seen and indicates a weak mind with no talent whatever for writing."

Ah, dear Collier's, and dear unknown reader in the fiction department.

George Davis New Commodore Of Motorboatmen

New commodore of the Victoria Inboard-Outboard Association is George E. Davis, member of the association for more than 15 years and official announcer at nearly all local and Vancouver Island race meets.

As a club member he has served as vice-commodore, secretary, and director.

On his executive will be George Baldwin, vice-commodore, inboards; Fred Graham, vice-commodore, outboards; Ed Dyer, secretary; Charles Mullins, treasurer; and Robert Bullivant and Ron Carlos, trustees.

Major events planned by the club for the 1957 racing season are a May 24th regatta for inboards and outboards, and the Western Canada championships on Labor Day.

Famed Sikh Defender Visits Here

The man who helped to halt deportation of Canadian Sikhs to British Honduras in 1909, was scheduled to arrive in Victoria today to take part in the Sikh community's Christmas religious ceremonies starting Sunday.

Seventy-nine-year-old Sant Teja Singh, lawyer, distinguished scholar in English and former professor of a Hindu University, who now is devoted to a religious life, is on a "Gospel" mission to British Columbia.

He will speak at the Sikh Temple next week. Arrangements are also being made for him to deliver a public lecture.

Sant Teja Singh took an active part in defending the Sikh immigrants during the 1908-9 race riots in Vancouver when a large section of the population demanded that all Orientals be deported from the country.

People at the time protested the importation of cheap labor into Canada and asked Ottawa to send the Sikhs and Japanese to British Honduras.

The Indian became spokesman for the Sikhs and opposed the deportation movement in Ottawa. He asked the British Government to intervene and it was largely due to his efforts that no measures were taken to send East Indians to the British colony.

Regarded as many as a "saint," Sant Teja Singh has led a life which in many ways is similar to the life of Gandhi. He fought for Indian rights, established schools and religious colleges and attempted to promote a better understanding between Christianity and eastern religions.

Born in Punjab in 1877, Sant Teja Singh graduated from the Government College, Lahore, in 1898. In 1901 he became a qualified lawyer and a year later received his MA degree.

In England, he took higher studies at the University of Cambridge and University College, London.

It was through his efforts the Sikh temples in Victoria, Stockton, Calif., and London, Eng., were built.

'We'll Be Home For Christmas' —Sudbury Crew

"Home for Christmas" is the watchword aboard the Victoria deep-sea salvage tug Se Sudbury today, as she steams through heavy seas in the western Pacific with the British freighter Ms Ravenmore in tow.

Capt. Harley Blagborne, before leaving here last Sunday for the rendezvous with the freighter, set Dec. 23 as target date for his return.

He reported Friday night the tug and tow were making good progress but seas were building up and winds freshening.

The freighter suffered machinery breakdown about 1,200 miles off Cape Flattery and radioed for aid.

Victoria Boat Taken in Tow

The Victoria pleasure craft Cape Clear was taken in tow by the tug La Garde early today after running out of fuel in Active Pass, between Galiano and Mayne Islands, according to Canadian Press.

Aboard were Clifford Petrie of Victoria and an unidentified companion. A distress call was sent out after the boat began to drift in a 30-mile blow.

The call was picked up by RCAF search and rescue squadron at Vancouver and the La Garde, owned by Vancouver Tow Boat Co., was dispatched. A tow line was affixed at about 2 a.m., and the Cape Clear towed to Vancouver.

1,800 Phones Knocked Out In Fairfield

Water Seepage Hits Underground Cable

B.C. Telephone Co. crewmen were working shortly before noon today trying to locate trouble in a cable between Yates and Fort on Ormond which knocked out 1,800 telephones in the Fairfield district.

The phones started going dead immediately after 4 p.m. Friday and the situation became progressively worse. Workmen had been endeavoring to locate the exact trouble site since 7 a.m. today.

Trouble was in an underground cable, believed to have a hole in it which has filled with water seepage.

The work was slowed when flooded manholes leading to the cables had to be pumped out before inspection started.

DON'T KNOW WHEN

Company officials could offer no predictions as to when service would be resumed.

Meanwhile, rain which started at 8:30 p.m. Friday and let up shortly before 11 a.m. today, was expected to split sporadically over the weekend. But there will be no continued heavy rain.

During the night and through to mid-morning today, about three-quarters of an inch fell. Described by the weatherman as "a good rain," it was not enough to start repetition of the flooding experienced at the beginning of the week, although low-lying areas were beginning to fill up.

DUFFEL BAGS BULGE

Sailor 'Santas' Home Again

There was a gay yuletide atmosphere at HMCS Naden Friday when the big training cruiser HMCS Ontario nosed alongside the jetty after her last cruise for 1956.

About 500 friends and relatives of crew members—with a heavy representation of tiny tots—lined the jetty as the Naden band played the ship home with "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town."

When the gangways were down at 3 p.m., they clambered aboard the ship, locating husbands and fathers and trying to pry loose Christmas secrets.

"You'll have to wait for Santa," was the standard answer as mysterious parcels were loaded into duffel bags.

Most asked question: "Will you be on duty Christmas?" The cruise took the ship first to northern B.C. ports, then to San Francisco.

Across Esquimalt harbor other ships of the Pacific Command sported Christmas trees at their foremasts and other decorations concealing the grim weapons of their trade.

HMCS James Bay returned to HMC Dockyard today, last ship back before Christmas, and naval ship movements will be at a standstill until the new year.

Older Boys' Parliament In Victoria Dec. 27-30

Youths between the ages of 16 and 21 will hold a full-scale parliament in the B.C. Legislature Dec. 27-30.

They are members of the Older Boys' Parliament sponsored by the Inter-Church Parliamentary Committee of Vancouver.

W. A. Neen has been named premier for the session and Douglas Norman will act as leader of the opposition. A lieutenant-governor has still to be appointed.

Two-Cent Boost Starts In Vancouver on Monday

An increase in retail milk prices in the Victoria area is expected to follow increases announced in Vancouver today by the Dairyland Division of the Fraser Valley Milk Producers' Association.

Starting Monday, the association will increase the price of milk delivered to homes on the mainland by two cents a quart, while the price of wholesale milk to stores will go up three cents a quart.

But no increase in Victoria prices is likely before the New Year, a spokesman for the Victoria Pasteurized Milk Distributors' Association said.

WAGES KEY

"We have made no move as yet to raise prices," he added. "What we decide to do will depend on our forthcoming negotiations with the Milk Drivers' and Dairy Employees' Union."

An official of the Milk

Drivers' Union said in Vancouver that a meeting with Victoria and Vancouver Island members to discuss hours and wages will be held before the end of the year.

"On the mainland, the milk drivers' union has already obtained a $15 a month increase for all dairy employees retroactive to March 1, 1956."

SAME BOOST

It is expected Victoria dairies will be asked for a similar increase.

"If wages go up here, it seems fairly certain we shall have to raise prices," a Victoria dairyman said today, "and there are other costs to be considered as well."

"Equipment and supply costs as well as wages have risen steadily since 1951 and these increases have not been passed on to the consumer. They have been absorbed by the industry."

Power Supply Contract Ends In Three Years

A contract between B.C. Electric for the supply of power by the commission to the lower end of Vancouver Island will be terminated Oct. 1, 1959, "by mutual agreement," both utilities announced today.

At present the B.C. Electric takes 37,000 kilowatts from the commission. The power will be "recaptured" by the commission in two steps, the first to take place Oct. 1, 1958, when 17,000 kilowatts will be surrendered.

The balance will be taken back by the commission a year later. Both utilities said the new 132,000-volt B.C. Electric undersea cable from the mainland to the island was the main factor in making conclusion of the contract possible.

It has been in effect since 1949 and demand was increased during negotiations every two years to the present delivery by the power commission of 37,000 kilowatts.

The existing interconnection between the BCE and power commission systems at Stratford, near Duncan, will be continued for the interchange of electricity whenever desirable and possible, and as an emergency standby for both utilities.

Yule Lights Judging Set Next Week

With only ten more days to Christmas, many Victorians will spend the weekend decorating the outside of their homes with sparkling lights and ornaments for the city's annual Christmas decorating contest.

The contest, sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, has nearly 55 entries to date.

Peter Brown, contest committee chairman, said judging of decorated homes in six different classes, will take place between December 20 and 25.

A group of six judges have been selected.

He also announced a large Nativity scene which the Jaycees are constructing at the Kiwanis old age pensioners' village, will be completed by Wednesday of next week.

Since the Jaycees sponsored the contest six years ago, Victoria has become, on a per capita basis, the most decorated city in Canada.

Hefty Thieves Take Safe Holding $450

Strongbox Weighed 375 Pounds

Thieves who lugged a 375-pound safe from a Gorge Road service station overnight escaped with $450.

Saanich police said the Gorge Road Auto Service office, at Gorge and Wasana, was broken into sometime between 10 p.m. and 4 a.m.

The theft was discovered on a routine police patrol check. The front door had been forced open by a pinbar used to splinter a panel beside the lock. The office was lighted only from a neon sign outside.

TWO MEN NEEDED Detective Joe Armstrong said it would take at least two men to lift the safe, which is 30 inches high and 18 inches across, and grey in color.

It was apparently hoisted into a car or truck outside the office. The safe contained $400 in bills and $50 in rolls of coins.

FAMILY COURT 'GREAT NEED'

Delinquent Girl Moved to Poetry

By DINAH KERR

Victoria needs a family court to deal with potential young criminals, according to Col. W. S. Dingley, supervisor of the Juvenile Foster Home on Coldharbour Road here.

The court should be established in conjunction with the juvenile court as a "major step" towards curbing outbursts of juvenile delinquency and teenage rowdiness, he said.

Cases would be dealt with in private enabling parents to get advice and help without going to the police. "Parents often won't report their children to the police until the situation gets out of hand," he said. "If Victoria had a family court acting in a preventive capacity a lot of cases need never reach juvenile court."

Broken Homes Eighty per cent of juvenile delinquency is caused by broken homes, Col. Dingley pointed out. "There should be some kind of court for senile delinquents, too," he said. "They cause juvenile delinquency. Children who get a decent break at home usually don't get into trouble."

Col. and Mrs. Dingley have been supervisors of the juvenile home for 10 years. They've sheltered more than 1,000 boys and girls awaiting trial in juvenile court.

They've developed a philosophy about kids. "You can't legislate them," said the colonel. "We take them as we find them. You've got to be firm and just and honest. The odd youngster won't respond but I've never been called upon to use force."

He admitted to boxing a boy's ears once "just to give him a gentle reminder that he mustn't tell lies."

"As a rule the kids come in with a chip on their shoulders," he said. "If you sit tight and say nothing he'll usually tell you his story, but if you ask him right off the bat, he'll lie."

Bath First Weapons are removed and the teenagers are given a bath as soon as they're admitted.

Some still manage to destroy the furniture in the recreation room and scribble obscenities on books and walls.

Girls are the worst offenders, says Mrs. Dingley. Just recently one girl was placed in the freshly-painted "cubbyhole" for misbehavior.

U.S. Turkeys Flood Market; Island Producers Protesting

Vancouver Island turkey raisers said today the "bottom has been knocked out of their business" due to a flood of bird imports from the United States for Christmas.

Producers are receiving 31 cents a pound (live weight) for birds 18 lbs. and under, and 28 cents for birds over 18 lbs., they said. Last December prices were 40 and 32 cents per lb.

"There is no profit for the producer in these prices," said one turkey raiser. "The price is just enough to cover cost of feed and other expenses for raising the birds."

On a retail level, the average turkey price is 52 cents a pound for birds over 18 lbs., and 55 cents for 18 lbs. and under. Some retail outlets are selling their birds at slightly lower prices.

A government official confirmed that the B.C. market is receiving U.S. birds. This was affecting the island's turkey industry, he said.

"Imports are allowed in," he said, "because B.C. does not produce quite enough turkeys for the needs of the population."

He said 6,500,000 turkeys have so far been shipped from the United States into Canada. The bulk of these went to British Columbia and Ontario.

Four persons were injured, none seriously, Friday night when two cars collided on Parson's Bridge on the old island highway.

RCMP said the cars were driven by C. N. Butler, 302 Zealous Crescent, and Alfred Victor Peatt, Sooke.

Butler was treated at HMCS Naden hospital for abrasions and released.

Peatt, his wife, and passenger Robert Wishart, Colwood P.O., were treated for cuts and bruises at Royal Jubilee Hospital and released.

Oak Bay High School students will present a Christmas concert in the school auditorium Wednesday and Thursday at 8 p.m.

Program will include four student choirs, Oak Bay Schools Band, choir, Oak Bay Schools Band, Oak Bay Hand-Bell Ringers, dance presentations, a one-act Christmas play and community singing with the band.

Victoria police have asked public assistance in locating George McInnes, about 60, believed living in the city.

CHURCH EXPANSION

Parishioners Aid Workmen

CHEMANUS — Parishioners of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church are busy these days helping carpenters to enlarge the "little church on the hill."

A 40 by 20-foot addition to the rear of the church will provide for a much needed expansion of the church itself, as well as many new facilities. This is the first addition to the church since it was erected here about 45 years ago.

The new three-floor addition will provide a furnace room and meeting hall downstairs, a priest's office and quarters on the main floor, and an additional hall on the upper floor.

The altar will be moved back. Other facilities to be added to the church include a new sacristy to hold the church robes, and a new confessional.

Members of the church building committee are John Harrison, chairman; Rev. E. M. Lauzier, A. W. Van Der Staap, Martin van Cooten, and A. Jansen.

YOU SAID TO ME-

A Sunday message of help and comfort for those puzzled, depressed or low in spirit.

By ETHEL TULL

You said to me, "One can't drag religion into every conversation."

I don't think you had considered the significance of what you were saying. If something so possesses one that it affects one's whole personality—thoughts, words and deeds—it can never have to be dragged into a conversation; it is always present in one's own person. And I think that if religion does not mean that, it means very little.

You say you can think about the way of life Christ taught while you are at home, or in ordinary surroundings, but the sense of His presence fades when you are part of a cocktail party or other similar gathering. It is not for me to judge or plan another person's life, but it seems to me that if you cannot take Christ with you to any party, then there must be either something very wrong in your relationship with Him, or else you should not be there at all.

If Christ is with you, there will be no holding forth about your views, but every look, word and deed will be natural and right. You will not be a wet blanket on the party, but the joy may be deeper and of a different nature because you are there. There must be many others who feel as you do, and perhaps have been letting down their standards. They may need your help to raise everything to a higher level where there is real fellowship, and happiness does not have to be manufactured.

In your quiet times, ask God about this matter, and He will make it plain to you (if you really want to know) where you should be, and what you should say and do. I can only hold up to you the ideal as I see it, and pray for more grace in my own faulty life.

As we get closer to the Christmas season the spotlight touches many scintillating facets of the city's social life . . . The wedding of a charming young couple symbolizes the many others who will exchange marriage vows during the holiday week . . . The story of a happy children's party is merely one of the highlights of a Yuletide season that will be filled with festivities.

Children's Party

Empress Hotel

Saturday, December 22

The Hometowns, led by Fred Usher, will be in attendance and during the party Santa Claus will pay a visit and distribute favors to the children. There will also be games, carol singing and dancing.

Prizes will be given in four classes: Girls under six years, boys under six years, girls over six years and boys over six years. Judges are announced as Mrs. Hector Alexander, Mrs. Derek Todd, Mrs. George Gregory and Mrs. Cyril Chapman.

Mayor Percy Scurreh and Mrs. Scurreh have consented to act as patrons.

Convener in charge of arrangements is Mrs. V. Downard, assisted by Mrs. J. A. Pollard, Mrs. G. Clarke and Mrs. W. G. Thompson. Tickets for the party may be obtained at the Empress Hotel or at Eaton's box office from Tuesday morning on.

"The Belle of the Ball" . . . Mickey Hill-Tout models a delicate tiara by Wiesner of New York. The pearls and rhinestones are suspended on silver wire to form a feather design. A tiny bone comb on either end holds the tiara firmly in place. The rhinestone earrings are shaped to follow the curve of the ear and are of the clip-on variety.

"My Fair Lady" . . . Truly elegant is the single draped ostrich plume of snow white which Mickey wears in her shining brunette hair. The chandelier earrings are designed of sparkling rhinestones in baguette design.

"Lady of the East" . . . Chignon sticks of tiny pearls and diamante are eye-catching and yet so simple to use. Wiesner of New York designed the elaborate earrings which almost completely encircle the ear. Around Mickey's shoulders is draped a lovely Indian sari of white and gold. The sari would make a very useful head covering on a windy evening.

IN STEP WITH STYLE

Longer, More Disciplined Are the Winter Coiffures

By NONA DAMASKE

Hair styles for winter have definitely turned out to be longer, though not as long as the extremists might have wished. A little bit longer and a lot more disciplined, that is the change in the fashion of hair . . .

and a big change it is, from the years of constant cropping and casual comb-throughs.

The high or low chignon, the French twist and the caught-back cluster of curls lend themselves beautifully to hair ornaments. There certainly need be no lack of variety if a little imagination is put to work.

Flowers, of course, come quickly to mind. For formal occasions you might consider a fresh flower arrangement of small blossoms to tone with your gown. I know of one lady in a Victoria florist shop who is a perfect genius in this respect.

JEWELS IN HAIR

Clips and pins can be arranged on a chignon in almost any way. Look through your jewel box and try a few pieces in your hair. You will be surprised how versatile some of your jewelry can be.

If you are fortunate enough to have female relatives who have treasured lovely tortoiseshell combs now is the time to tell them that the combs will be more lovely if they are used. Ropes of pearls, gleaming satin ribbon, soft feathers, velvet leaves and velvet bows are a few items you might consider for your hair.

If your hair is not long enough

Officers Returned — Mrs. Bertha Parsons conducted the election of officers of the Alpha Group of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Metropolitan United Church, when all officers were returned for another year. Mrs. William McCulloch presided at the meeting and Mrs. E. J. Bonfoy took the devotionals. Refreshments were served by Mrs. McCulloch and Mrs. D. Gush.

SHOPPING GUIDE

'Coffee for a Crowd' Subject of Free Booklet

By PENNY SAVER

Have you ever thought about how big a part coffee plays in our everyday lives?

When you have people in, you serve coffee. When you want a bit of reviving after a long day, when you're stopping "just for a breather," and to say nothing of meal times, coffee is what you want. Though we make it so often, when it comes to having a coffee party or early-day reception that calls for coffee, it's amazing how little knowledge we have as to amounts and methods of preparation.

Now, during the festive season, perhaps you're planning a coffee party. If so, you'll appreciate the hints I found in a handy FREE booklet. Not only the brewing of the coffee, but the running of the party is suggested, too.

About the Table . . .

Sizes: Give yourself serving space. For small group, table should be six to eight feet long and 2 1/2 feet deep. For a large group, 10 feet or more, same depth.

Location: Place within three feet of wall. Avoid having near exits and entrances. This leads to congestion. Try to locate near kitchen.

Setting: Sugar, cream, spoons, napkins should be opposite end of table from serving area. This keeps traffic moving. China should be placed to the right of server and serving bowl. If reserve is needed, place on card table located to right and rear of service setting.

Empties: Provide a medium-sized table with trays or shallow boxes. Identify it with card sign reading "For used china". Make provisions to have it serviced frequently. Locate well to the left of serving table.

Well, there are some hints. This is only the beginning. If these have been a help to you and you'd like to have more information about "Coffee For a Crowd", you may have free copies.

Directions for making a brew in an old fashioned pot, a kettle, a drip pot, an urn are all in the booklet, and it explains how to effectively clean the different types of brew-makers.

If you'd like to have the folder, call me at 2-3131 and I'll tell you where to write for it.

HERBS IN THE HOME

Holiday Foods Chock Full Of Our Favorite Herbs

By PATRICIA RAE

People who scoff at the use of herbs in cooking and say they don't like them, seem to forget they always eat their Christmas dinners with great gusto, accepting without a qualm great helpings of turkey, lots of stuffing and cranberry sauce, followed by mince pies, plum pudding and what-have-you. Yet most of these traditional dishes include a few herbs; and if you grow herbs, you're able to add "just that little something from the garden" to each of these dishes, to improve the aroma and taste.

Poultry stuffings have been used for centuries, commencing with the days when a peacock was completely skinned without hurting its brilliant plumage, stuffed with sweet herbs and spices, roasted slowly for over 24 hours and then sewn up again and placed on the banquet table in all its glory! The boar's head—"bedecked with bays and rosemary"—was carried solemnly round the room.

Take a tip from this old Christmas ceremony and include a piece of bay-leaf, dried and finely ground, in your turkey stuffing.

SAVOURY STUFFING

In New Zealand I used to do up little cellophane packets of my own poultry seasoning. These were popular I kept the "formula" a secret, but will now whisper it to you!

One oz. thyme, 1 oz. marjoram, 1 oz. powdered rosemary, 1 oz. bay-leaves, 1 oz. lemon balm, 1/2 oz. winter savory, 1/2 oz. powdered apple mint.

This mixture kept its fragrance indefinitely, sealed in a screw-top jar.

HERBS IN MINCEMEAT
Our Christmas mince-meat always had a few aromatic herbs from the garden in it. A leaf or two of fresh Tansy, and one of orange mint gave it a lovely, spicy tang.

A FRAGRANT LEAF IN CAKE

For the dark, moist Christmas fruit cakes I loved to make (but had a terrible time decorating) I always dropped a leaf of scented geranium into the bottom of the cake-tin before pouring in the mixture. This imparted a lovely perfume to the finished fruit cake, which was made a month ahead of time and kept in a sealed tin before icing.

ANGELICA CAN BE FUN!

Home-grown candied angelica (which I've seen in one of the shops here) provided a lot of other delightful touches to the Christmas tea-table. (And what do you think we used as a cloth? . . . a scarlet Canadian Hudson's Bay blanket, which was always greatly admired!)

Sometimes I "braided" it into little sugar-mats, each covered with tiny home-made snowmen (made of potatoes, coconut and icing sugar). I also cut the angelica into leaves for cherry drops; stripes on the jackets of gingerbread men; little stalks for home-moulded marzipan fruit. Sugar peapods sometimes appeared on the table . . . angelica strips with tiny silver cactus! Green peppermint wafers, cut into triangles, were edible Christmas trees with angelica tree trunks, and little bundles of angelica tied with red bows made unusual Christmas place favors.

Wife of New Progressive Conservative Leader Has Charm, Poise; Well Known in Education

OTTAWA (BUP) — Olive Diefenbaker, the new "first lady of the Opposition," brings a wealth of experience in human relations to a job almost as taxing as that of her husband, John.

A relaxed, gracious and warm-hearted person, she fitted into the role of a front-rank MP's wife with ease when she married Diefenbaker Dec. 8, 1953. In two years in the nation's capital, and on tours with her husband, she has made hosts of friends with her kindness, a well-developed sense of humor, and an obvious concern for the problems and well-being of others.

HAS MUCH INFLUENCE

Those who know the Diefenbakers agree that she exerts a steady influence on John, whose nervous energy sometimes needs control. One is the perfect foil for the other, in public appearances and in their private life.

Born Olive Evangeline Freeman in Roland, Man., she was the younger daughter of Rev. Dr. C. B. Freeman and his wife, the former Angèle Alella Eaton, a Nova Scotian. The family, after her birth in Roland, lived in Moose Jaw, Prince Albert and Saskatoon, Sask., and then in Brandon, Man., where her father served on the college faculty.

She traces her ancestry in North America through 11 generations. Two of her forebears, Elder William Brewster and Richard Warren, came to America on the Mayflower and a Puritan background reveals itself in old family names—Thankful Bullard, Obadiah, Abner and Daniel Morse, Abel Parker, and Patience and Mercy Parker.

Santa a Guest At YWCA Party

As a climax to the fall activities of children's Saturday morning classes at the YWCA was a Christmas party held recently in the recreation room. Each group contributed to the entertainment and presents were distributed by Santa Claus. Chocolate milk and cookies were served.

Every Saturday morning in the YWCA, children in the eight to 12 year age group may be found busy at many activities. For relaxation and muscle-control, the children start with gymnastics and tumbling taught by Mrs. R. V. Gray. Square dancing class is popular and the children learn confidence and poise. Mrs. J. B. Hudson with the help of Miss Andwyn Wright is their instructor. Approximately 20 children gather in Miss Ruth Scott's class for drawing and painting and an equal number are busy in the creative crafts class of Mrs. A. D. MacKenzie.

The Ladies' Auxiliary to the Fraternal Order of Eagles, Tuesday, at 8 p.m., Eagles Hall, 751 View Street. Social hour to follow. Members to bring gifts and cards for exchange and groceries for hampers.

It was from the Nova Scotia branch of the family that Olive descended.

Her mother was a cousin of industrialist Cyrus Eaton. Her mother's uncle was in the first group of Baptist missionaries to go to India from the maritime provinces.

Olive was a teenager in Saskatoon when she first met Diefenbaker, who had just returned from overseas service in World War 1. His family belonged to her father's church.

John's and Olive's ways took different paths soon after. She came east and graduated from McMaster University at Hamilton, Ont., and then went on to the Ontario College of Education. She taught first at Huntsville High School and then at Guelph Collegiate Institute, where she stayed until 1933 when she married Harry F. Palmer, a Toronto lawyer.

They had one daughter, Carolyn, who was two years old when her father died. Olive went back to teaching, first at Arthur, Ont., and then at Owen Sound and a year or so ago laid a cement walk on her own. When Carolyn was married about a year ago to Donald Weir of Scarborough, Ont., her mother made most of the trousseau.

Her mind is free from prejudice and her outlook is modern. She defends the right of women to work, holding a firm belief that members of her sex can and should make the fullest possible contribution to their communities and society in general.

GUIDANCE DIRECTOR

She was acting director of guidance for the department when she married Diefenbaker in 1953. His first wife, Edna, died.

One of her attitudes toward life is to live calmly, and to live one day at a time. She reads extensively, travels almost everywhere with John—including a visit to the Middle East two years ago—and often makes public speeches to women's groups, but usually on non-political topics.

She revels in working with her hands, especially on leathercraft, metal work and sewing.

Victoria Skater With Ice Capades Brings Early Christmas to Family

By KITTY DIXON

Skater Dorothy Bradshaw came home for Christmas... but she had to set the clock a week ahead to do it.

Christmas comes tomorrow in the Bradshaw household, because Dorothy must return to the Ice Capades company next weekend, ready to open on Christmas Day in Phoenix, Ariz.

Dorothy's mother, Mrs. P. Bradshaw, 1324 Finlayson Street, went shopping yesterday, for the makings of a sumptuous Yuletide dinner with all the trimmings.

And Dorothy, who plans to "starve on eggs and steak next week," is going to make it her last eating spree before she returns to the routine of a professional skater.

"We have to keep our weight down. My limit has been set at 125 pounds," said the svelte and lovely skater, who likes a hearty meal.

"I've gained weight this week at home, so must start dieting immediately to lose about four pounds before I rejoin the company."

Ice Capades girls have to "weigh in" every week, and those who persist in overeating are quickly fired.

KEPT PLANS SECRET

Dorothy Bradshaw kept the Ice Capades last July, having auditioned for the show when it was here in January.

"I didn't tell anybody I'd been accepted at first," she said, "because I wasn't sure that I wanted to leave my job and Victoria for a showgirl's life, travelling around the country."

"It took me several months to decide to go, but I'm so glad I did. It's so exciting!"

When she joined the company in July, Dorothy had missed summer training for this year's show, so had to put in many hours of practice while the show was on the road.

She skates an average of five hours a day... more on Saturdays, when the Ice Capades usually stages three shows. She's one of a glamorous line of 20 girls.

Dorothy plans to leave the ice show after another season. "I think that, by then, I'll have had enough travel, and will want to settle down... here in Victoria, of course."

She trained in Victoria under

Dorothy Bradshaw inspects her custom-made ice skates to make certain they are in readiness for her return to the Ice Capades Show next week.

Mary Rose Thacker and Fay Morris. At that time skating was just a recreation, her full-time job being secretary to Jim Lackie of the Canadian Stevedoring Company.

The Ice Capades has taken this Victoria girl to such cities as Baltimore, Columbus, Dallas and Atlantic City. The company recently spent a month in Mexico. Dorothy loved every minute of her stay, but she has one regret. "We could never get to the bull fights, because they would begin at 4.30, and our show started at 5.00," she said.

Training for next year's Ice Capades show will begin in April, while the company is still touring. In May they will go to Los Angeles for concentrated training. Then, after a month's vacation, it will be "back to the road."

Meanwhile, Dorothy's taking it easy. She can sleep late, visit her friends and plan Christmas at home with her family, just as it's always been — even though it is a few days early.

Victorians can see her on the ice in January, when the Ice Capades comes to Memorial Arena.

For travelling on a honeymoon trip to California, the bride chose a brown suit dress with white accessories.

Best man for the groom was Allan Keyworth, while ushering guests to pews were Bill Duggans, Keith Cutler, Charles Sunderland and Dode French. Canyon Gardens, North Vancouver, was chosen for the wedding reception. A mist of pink

NEW ARRIVALS
Black and white border collie, about 10 months old, female, found in business district.
Black cocker spaniel, male, found 1000 block Tillicum.

READY FOR ADOPTION
Most unusual combination is Tar, part boxer, part malamute. Fluffy looking, but friendly; fine with the children, bad with other dogs. Ideal companion for a lonely country home needing protection.

Rex is a very fine male collie, from aristocratic nose to bushy tail. Needs a home with lots of running room. About two years old.

Pups--Pups--Pups--No less than nine of assorted types, all about six weeks old, all female.

Cuddles is a very beautiful gal, much more dignified than her name. Cross between Irish setter and pointer, three months old.

Sad faced, long eared, but as friendly as his name is Pal, a rather astonishing mixture of beagle and something unidentified. Has had all shots.

A lovely little 10-week-old puppy, black and white, considerably colie. Healthy and loveable.

Sparks' people are moving a long way away... too far to take this soft-eyed, gentle black and white spaniel with them.

Big, sad-eyed, droop-jowled Pongo is as good a Newfoundland as you'll ever meet--except in the unfortunate matter of chickens. Two years old, male.

Boots, a rough-coated terrier, is almost a model for the original shaggy dog. He's one year old, apparently has had an unfortunate experience with young children as he doesn't like them -- but he's a good house dog.

CHANGEOVERS
To each word below, add a letter at each end (except S) so that another word is formed. For example, to expand the word "over," add C and T to form "covert." How quickly can you complete the change-over of all the words in the following list:

- | | |
|-----------|------------|
| 1. -HANG- | 8. -RANG- |
| 2. -LANE- | 9. -AIDE- |
| 3. -AMEN- | 10. -REAM- |
| 4. -RING- | 11. -OARS- |
| 5. -RITE- | 12. -ADAM- |
| 6. -RISK- | 13. -PACE- |
| 7. -LUNG- | 14. -RAVE- |

What is the difference between a bad boy and a postage stamp?

ADD-A-LETTER PROBLEM

After the first word, each missing word in the following is to be supplied by combining all letters of the preceding word with one new letter. To start you off: contained is the first word are the three letters i r g. See if you can take it from there.

The xxx of his boat is the very best. Everyone in the harbor can hear his commands xxx out as he holds the tiller and xxx from sheer delight. He acquired his love of the sea in the Navy from which he had to xxx because of ill-health. He is still xxx in the reserve. He is known for xxx connections with acquaintances who belittle his present mode of life and then xxx his decisions as he realizes they do not understand. His way of xxx life's happiness lies in his xxx present way.

A COMMON CHRISTMAS GROUND
See if you can figure out a common denominator for each of the following groups. All are apropos of Christmas.

1. Comet, Cupid, Dasher, Rudolph.
2. Spruce, Balsam, Fir, Hemlock.
3. Balhazar, Melchior, Gaspar.
4. Jovaux Noel, Buon Natale, Felices Pascuas.
5. Tiny Tim, Scrooge, Bob Cratchit, Jacob Marley.

LADDER EXERCISE
Here is a ladder with rungs, or treads, numbered from 1 to 9, up which you are invited to climb, counting your steps as you go.

First, let's suppose that you are standing on the ground. The idea is to count each step so that you will arrive at the top in a specified number.

During the exercises you may step up or down, of course. The number of steps with which you are asked to reach the top is nineteen. Are you able to make it?

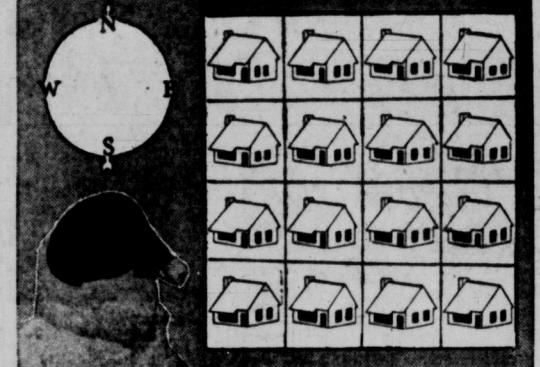

CHRISTMAS QUOTE
Charles Dickens, whose "A Christmas Carol" expresses the spirit of the coming season which so many persons feel, had a personal credo regarding the Yuletide which many might emulate.

It is given in his words below as a substitution cryptogram for you to solve. Clue: there is one word in it which you should be able to spot right away; it reveals eight letters.

What is the quotation?
G V G J J F N L N Q
A F Q G R K M R G L
K Z F B M Q S, M L T
S K J S N I B B O G S
M J J S F B Z B M Q.

Answer: "I will honor Christmas in my heart, and try to keep it all the year; I will follow its teaching, and will strive to be like the Master."

SANTA HAS A HOUSING PROBLEM

Browns, south of the Greens, west of the Whites and east of the Blues. Our southeast corner touches the Cackleberrys, who are northwest neighbors of the Whiffletrees. Love, Suzanne.

CRACKING DOWN ON SHOPPING
To simplify Christmas shopping, Mr. and Mrs. Rickey De-Rax each year exchange a deck and a rack. A slick rick and a crack rack together cost 150 simoleons. At that, the rick costs 26 more simoleons more than the rack. How much then, is the rack worth?

IT'S YOUR MOVE
By MILLARD HOPPER
White's so generous here, he almost gives the game away. But he manages to win in a tight squeeze. White, travelling up the board, moves first, and wins in four moves. Can you play it out his way?

JIMMY'S ALLOWANCE
How much money has Jimmy to spend on gifts? He has three times as many quarters as dimes, eight times as many dollars as dimes, and nine times as many pennies as his one dime.

BRAIN TEASER
The value of a Biblical piece of silver in Old Testament days was fifty-six and two-fifths cents, by modern calculation. If Joseph was sold into bondage by nine of his brothers for twenty pieces of silver, how much was the share of each?

TONGUE TWISTERS
Say aloud swiftly and repeatedly:
Eighty elves easily ogled ugly igloos.
Long, lank, lean and lazy Lola lolled luxuriously.

BEFORE AND AFTER FACE

A big part of the pleasure of Christmas comes from not knowing what your gifts will be and getting surprises. It's reason enough to look glib, if there's no prospect of gifts, and you're entitled to an expression of delight when you open them--as demonstrated by the two-faced elf above. You can have fun with his "before and after" look. Cut out the elf's face and paste it to cardboard. Then put a thumbtack through his nose into an eraser on the end of a pencil. Now spin him around.

BUZZ SAWYER

IT'S A SEALED UNIT-- CONNECTED TO A SHORT-WAVE SET.

JUST ONE TOUCH OF THE WRONG WIRE-- AND WE'RE GONERS!

RODNEY HELPED MY INSTALL. RODNEY KNOWS BEST HOW TO DISCONNECT.

SAM JUST CALLED TO YOU FROM UPSTAIRS. SAYS UZZ.

I HEARD A NOISE AT THE BIG DOOR.

WHAT ARE YOU AFTER?

WE JUST WANT YOUR FURS, THAT'S ALL... NOBODY'S GONNA GET HURT IF THEY DON'T INTERFERE.

MEANWHILE, MARK HAS GONE TO THE GALLEY FOR A CUP OF COFFEE.

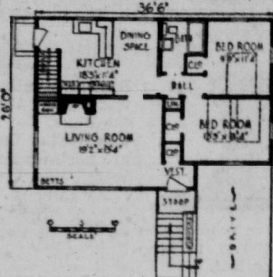

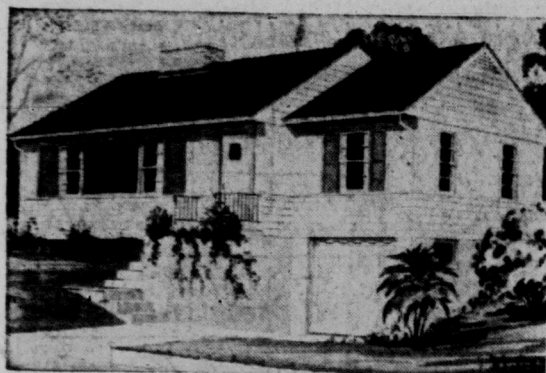

THEY'RE OFF! THE B-29 WILL LAUNCH THE SKY WITCH AT 30,000 FEET. WITH ALL ROCKETS FIRING, SAWYER WILL SHOOT UP TO 50,000 OR BETTER AND EXPLODE THE THERMAL THICKET.

THEY'RE READY TO GO, ADMIRAL. THE SKY WITCH IS ON BOARD THE B-29.

DON'T OUR OTHER SKY WITCH EXPLODE ON ITS LAST FLIGHT? YES. THE FLAME WAS KILLED.

I'LL KEEP MY FINGERS CROSSED TILL SAWYER LANDS.

HERE'S A BIT APPREHENSIVE. THIS IS SAWYER'S FIRST ALL-ROCKET-POWERED FLIGHT.

HOUSE TO GROW ON A HILLSIDE

For the man with a house on his mind and a hillside building location, here is a tailor-made design. The spacious over-all effect comprises four well-planned rooms that add up to the efficiency of five because of the generous dining space adjoining the kitchen. Plans are available from The Loder Co., Edmonton.

BEASTALL ADVISES

Turn of the Year Time to Sow Tomato Seed for Early Crop

By JACK BEASTALL

If you are an average gardener you will enjoy the thrill of picking ripe tomatoes off your own plants in June. Should you have a greenhouse with a small heater, or a sunporch with good light and a little warmth from the home heating system, you can have ripe home-grown tomatoes to go with the early lettuce, radish and spring onions.

In my opinion, tomatoes belong with the late spring and early summer salads, and I am hardly interested in a bumper crop in late September when soups and stews are more to my liking.

To get early tomatoes requires the early sowing of seed. We find the last week of December, between Christmas and New Year's Day, to be a good time. It is also a good feeling to get away from tinsel and feasting, get one's hands back into the good soil, and start the next season's gardening.

First we need the seed, and this must be a suitable variety for indoor growing. Since tastes and conditions vary so greatly, specific recommendations are not wise. It is better to try several varieties over the years until a near perfect one is found.

A greenhouse will accommodate a tall growing vine, and among this type we find such names as Tuckermans, Vagabond, V121, Vulcan, Best of All, Ailsa Craig and Vetomold.

COMPACT IN POTS
In the sunporch or a sunny window there is no place for a 10-foot vine, but many of the outdoor bush types will do well under such conditions. They are quite compact when grown in pots, require no pruning of side growths, but do not supply the quantity of fruits obtainable from a vine.

A few of the bush type are: Puck, the English tomato bred for growing under continuous glass cloches; Victor, Meteor, and the newer English called Amateur which I have not tried indoors.

JULY TO SEPTEMBER
Since we are only sowing six or 12 seeds a selection from the bush type enables us to use the balance of the packet for the main crop outdoors. Puck, for instance, gave us the first vine-ripened fruit on July 29 this year and cropped steadily until the end of September.

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

Fuchsias and hydrangeas in pots being stored indoors for winter must not be allowed to become too dry. Give a little water occasionally.

Top dress Clivia miniata, the fleshy-rooted pot plant which produces stems of scarlet lily-like flowers in spring. Water moderately.

Plants in cold frames should be carefully inspected after recent cold spells. Remove decayed leaves from cuttings which are there to be rooted. Admit air on all occasions when temperatures are above freezing, especially during mild rainy spells. Press back plants which have been heaved by frost if you are able to get on the soil. This attention will be necessary with plants which were planted in the late fall.

Cinerarias in pots will come along well in a 45-50 deg. F. temperature, and now may receive watering of balanced fertilizer and soot water every 10 days after buds show.

Iron's Sole Needs Care

Life of an electric iron may depend on the care its sole receives from the housewife.

The iron needs protection from scratches and dents. Don't scrape off sticking starch with a knife or other sharp tools. If the iron does collect starch, cool before beginning to clean. Then use a very fine steel wool or damp cloth with non-abrasive scouring powder.

Buff the plate vigorously with a dry soft cloth after working it with steel wool. Then heat it slightly, apply beeswax or paraffin and cool.

Another dry cloth buffing will remove excess paraffin, which will guard against further sticking starch.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

Potted Chrysanthemums Winter Well in Cool Spot

Q.—I have had several chrysanthemums in eight-inch pots given me. They are almost over now, but I notice new growth starting around the base of the plants. Can I keep these plants for next year, and if so, how?—F.M.W., Sidney.

A.—When all the flowers are faded, cut down the old stems to about three inches. Place the pots close together in a cold frame which can be kept free from frost. Failing this, keep them in a light cool porch (40 degrees F.), shed, or basement window. By early March you can take the young growths and root them in sandy soil to make new plants to flower next fall.

Q.—Some of my daffodil tops are already an inch above ground. Should these be covered for protection?—L.B., Galtano.

A.—The tops will come to no harm if left uncovered unless a very prolonged freezing spell should come without a covering of snow. When daffodil bulbs are planted in October there is little trouble of this kind. It is usually those which have been left in from the past season which make early growth during a mild fall.

FIX-IT FORUM

Q.—Mildew has appeared on a couch which we stored in the basement. How can I get rid of it?—N.J.

A.—Make a solution of warm soapsuds, using a neutral soap. Dampen clean cloth with solution and rub spot vigorously. Then go over area with cloth dampened in cold water. You may have to repeat this procedure several times before mildew disappears.

HUTCHISON REPORTS

By BRUCE HUTCHISON, Editor, The Times

OTTAWA—After the whoopla of the Conservative convention and a storm of personal emotion which almost reduced him to tears, John Diefenbaker today faces the hard facts of politics and those facts are centred in Quebec.

His problem as a national party leader has many facets and many obstacles but his primary task is to break the solid Liberal hold on French Canada. It is only reporting obvious facts which Mr. Diefenbaker knows quite well, to say that he starts his march into Quebec under unsarily difficult auspices. The convention made sure of that.

The real anatomy of the convention and its possible results in national politics became clear as soon as the delegates met. Mr. Diefenbaker clearly had a majority of votes in his pocket but he had practically none in Quebec. The French Canadian delegation came here determined to stop the Diefenbaker band wagon and, if possible, to elect Donald Fleming on a second vote after David Fulton had been eliminated.

Hutchison

Openly Attacked by Balcer

The opposition to Mr. Diefenbaker in Quebec was so strong that Leon Balcer, the most prominent French Canadian leader and president of the National Conservative Association, openly attacked the favorite son of the Prairies. In an almost unbelievable act of party division Mr. Balcer condemned Mr. Diefenbaker for refusing to allow a French Canadian to second his nomination. This, in Mr. Balcer's opinion, was an affront to the French Canadian race. Of course it was not so intended. Mr. Diefenbaker had invited Premier Fleming of New Brunswick and General Peckles, VC, to nominate him and thought he had thus indicated his strength from sea to sea. The Quebec delegation did not take it this way and probably cast few votes for Mr. Diefenbaker, though the ballot was secret.

Most of the Quebec vote went to Mr. Fleming, who has the great advantage of bilingualism.

Mr. Fleming's hopes were destroyed by the delegations from Ontario, the West and the Maritimes who regarded him as being too close to the business interests of Toronto. Mr. Fulton was not a serious contender but as a young man he has staked out his claim to leadership later on.

Only a political miracle could elect a Conservative government next June. Everyone at the convention knew that. The practical question is whether the Conservative party can make substantial gains and thus establish itself beyond question as the only real alternative to the Liberal party, an alternative capable of absorbing all opponents of the government.

Coalition With Socreds?

In accepting the leadership amidst scenes of wild enthusiasm Mr. Diefenbaker spoke appropriately in generalities. A few moments later he got down to facts before a battery of tough newspapermen and at his first press conference he handled himself superbly. His opening sentences seemed to establish the issue on which he proposes to fight the next election—the re-establishment of the two-party system and the restoration of parliament's ancient liberties. They are sound valid and vote-getting issues, far more important than most of the planks in the party platform.

Did Mr. Diefenbaker expect to make inroads into Liberal Quebec? Yes, he did. Remarkably wryly that his party was in a minority federally in every province he said he hoped to make gains everywhere. How did he expect to win the election? Well, he needed, he said, to change only 8½ per cent of the popular vote and this he believed could be done.

Perhaps his most significant utterance raised the possibility of a coalition or at least some working arrangement between the Conservative and Social Credit parties. Asked point blank if he would accept Social Credit support, Mr. Diefenbaker said he would accept support from any voter. Would he consider a coalition with Social Credit? He would take no immediate stand on that matter which must be decided by the party, not by him alone. Thus the prospect of a realignment of the right against the St. Laurent government cannot be ruled out, provided Social Credit would consider it.

Real core of Mr. Diefenbaker's problem and fulcrum of national politics remains as always in Quebec where Mr. Diefenbaker through no fault of his own but through the indiscreet actions of some French Canadian Conservatives has made an unhappy start. Nevertheless not merely his friends but his Liberal opponents believe that his eloquence, energy and very high abilities will certainly increase his party's strength in the next parliament.

Socred Leader Dead Against Tory Merger

OTTAWA (CP)—Social Credit Leader Low said today he can see no grounds on which his party could form a coalition with the Progressive Conservatives.

He was commenting on a statement made by John Diefenbaker Friday shortly after being chosen the Conservatives' new national leader.

Mr. Low said no approach has ever been made to him with such a suggestion. Considering all the differing views held by the two parties, he added, "there would be no ground on which we could possibly do such a thing."

CHRISTMAS ON B.C.'s COAST

The story of how the Columbia Coast Mission brings Christmas to the outlying points on British Columbia's coast is the featured article in Weekend Magazine in this issue.

Yule Shopping Reaches Peak In Crowded City

Traffic-snarled streets, crowded sidewalks, tight-packed store aisles today pointed to one of the busiest Christmas seasons in Victoria's history.

Friday was payday for thousands of citizens, and from store opening time today they rushed downtown to lay in stocks of presents, food, decorations, and the tinsel and bangles of Yuletide.

Clerks in many major retail outlets didn't have time to talk between running from buyer to buyer.

Many stores said today was the heaviest buying day so far this year, and expect it to top even next Saturday.

Because of poor weather, which lightened in mid-morning, many persons had been delaying Christmas purchases. But when skies partially cleared, the sun drew them out for Christmas shopping.

Toy departments of larger stores were packed with children; clothing stores, both men's and women's, were rushed, as were candy stores, novelty shops, the five-and-dime stores and even some antique dealers.

"We can hardly move," said one store owner.

Cars were double-lined on Government Street, parking space was not to be found.

Early Voting Slowed by Rain

Rain put the damper on early voting in Greater Victoria's three municipalities as annual elections for council and one police commission got under way.

Brightening skies this afternoon were expected to bring out more voters before polls close at 8 p.m.

A total estimated 950 voters out of 19,839 eligible went to Saanich polls in the first 3½ hours of balloting to 11:30 a.m. At Oak Bay municipal hall, 664 voters had cast ballots to noon. There are 7,000 eligible voters.

In Esquimalt, where polls are set up at the municipal hall and 855 Craigflower, a light vote was recorded to noon. There are 3,328 eligible.

'CHEAP' SAYS HUNGARIAN... 'MINE BETTER'

Canada 'Second Class' From Start Say Returning Olympic Athletes

TORONTO (CP)—A Canadian Olympic Games coach and some 20 team members arrived here early today from Melbourne and said they developed inferiority complexes at the Games.

"A Hungarian track athlete came up to me one day and felt my sweat suit," related canoeist George Bossey of Montreal. "Cheap," he told me. "Mine better."

Commented Bossey: "It was, too. I represented Canada, the world's second wealthiest nation, and this guy from a small European country was better dressed than the Canadian athletes."

RAP TRAVEL CONDITIONS

Canoe coach Earl Whittall of Montreal was particularly annoyed at traveling conditions in Canada. He said athletes travelled by TCA's tourist flights both on the way to Vancouver en route to the Games and from the B.C. city on the way home.

"That means going 15 hours without a hot meal and without much sleep... It is as though no one in Canada cares whether we are represented in the Games or not."

TCA Atlantic Airliner Limpes Into London on Three Engines

LONDON (CP)—A Trans-Canada Air Lines Super-Constellation landed safely at London airport today on three of its four engines.

The plane left Montreal Friday night with 61 passengers and a crew of eight.

"We had a bumpy journey over the Atlantic—even before the engine cut out," one passenger told reporters at the airport. "But I am quite sure no one had any worries."

He said the passengers wore their safety belts for most of the flight.

"We didn't have to take any other precautions at all."

Pilot of the Canadian airliner was Capt. Bruce Bowden of Montreal. He sent a radio message to Shannon when the first engine—the inner starboard—quit during the night. The plane was at 23,000 feet, and he asked emergency permission to go down to 11,000 feet—below an altitude where icing conditions existed.

About 700 miles west of Ireland, a second engine began to act up, and Bowden requested air control at Prestwick, Scotland, for an escort plane. British newspapers say it was feared the plane might have had to come down at sea, and that ships in the area were asked to keep a lookout.

11 Grenade Raids, Kidnapping Spark Get Tough Policy

By LEONARD EDDINGTON

PORT SAID (AP)—British military authorities today seized every man, woman and child in a five-square block area in a new "get-tough" search for a kidnapped lieutenant and warned that Egyptian guerrilla attacks might provoke the British into "really violent action."

(British United Press reported the British troops seized close to 1,000 Egyptians in the raids.)

Lt.-Gen. Sir Hugh Stockwell, commander of the Anglo-French force, whose withdrawal from Egypt is being harassed by guerrilla grenade and rocket attacks, sent a letter of protest to the commander of the new United Nations Emergency Force demanding that the Egyptian authorities call off what he described as "a co-ordinated and sustained campaign of violence."

Stockwell insisted: "I reserve to myself the right to take whatever action I deem necessary for the security of the forces under my command."

Stockwell gave Maj.-Gen. E. L. M. Burns a long list of "flagrant breaches of the cease-fire agreement" and said there were 11 separate grenade throwing incidents in the last 24 hours "including the use of rocket launchers." One Egyptian was killed. British troops also sealed off the port area and the European quarter with a barbed wire barrier.

At El Ballah, United Nations sources said Israeli troops have halted their withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula pending a further agreement with the UN regarding the timetable and mechanics of the pullout.

There was no word where he might be or whether he is dead or alive.

While the search was under way in the northwest sector of town, Egyptian guerrillas attacked again in the southwest sector, tossing a grenade off the roof of a building into a UN jeep. Norwegian UN forces fired back.

FOG BLOCKS SEARCH FOR LOST AIRLINER

(See Also, Page 3)

For the sixth straight day bad weather today gripped the mountains of the mainland, preventing a mass air search 110 miles northeast of Victoria for an airliner missing since late Sunday with 62 persons aboard.

Fog prevailed over the Hope area and there was moderate to severe icing and freezing rain in the cloud above.

Fifty search aircraft were held to the ground.

'HUNGARY'S FIGHTING STUDENTS'

Oak Bay Pupils Aid Fund, Total Passes $4,200 Mark

Volunteers from the Junior Red Cross Club at Oak Bay Junior High School, who collected funds twice daily from classrooms between Dec. 7 and 14, raised $65 for the "Hungary Fighting Students" fund.

Even without the school contribution the fund now totals $4,217.30.

"The students felt there was no better way of showing the Christmas spirit than helping those students less fortunate than they," said Mrs. Beverley Andersen, teacher in charge of the club.

"The Red Cross students were most co-operative, for there were many more volunteers than were needed to assist in the drive," she said.

Given credit for the campaign and the daily collections were Connie Ballam, Red Cross Club president; Ron Morgan, vice-president; and members Penny Dalby, Joan Livesey, Russ Morgan, Gerry Shanks, Gordon Vickery, and David Bartlett.

The students have put a cheque for the donation in the mail, for delivery to The Times next week.

Rape Jurors Threatened

(FROM CP DISPATCHES)

NEW WESTMINSTER—Two members of an assize court jury have been threatened in anonymous phone calls, the jury foreman told Mr. Justice J. C. Rutan Friday.

Trevor Evans told the court he and juror Clarence Wells had received calls.

The jury is hearing the rape trial of Kie, Puga and Jumbo Singh.

"Don't blame the accused or attach any significance to this," the judge told the jury. "I am sure they don't know anything about it."

The foreman said his wife received a phone call about 10:40 p.m. Thursday and was told: "Your husband better get off the jury. I wouldn't want to see your husband or your family hurt."

The foreman said Mr. Wells had been warned by an anonymous phone number not to turn up for the trial.

Vancouver Man Held by FBI On Swindle Charge

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — The Federal Bureau of Investigation said it arrested a man identified as Frederick Douglas Drew of Vancouver here Thursday on a swindling indictment issued in the name of Edwin P. Wetherston.

Arraignment was postponed until Monday while the FBI checked fingerprints.

Dormitories Substandard At UBC—Moore

PORT ALBERNI — Unless the provincial government soon makes funds available to help the University of British Columbia, Canadians are likely to become mere "hewers of wood and drawers of water," it has been forecast by Jack Moore, IWA official here.

Quoting from the "Ubysey," campus students' publication, he said dormitory conditions at the university are below the minimum standards set by the Workmen's Compensation Board for logging camps.

"Students must double up for nearly everything," he said. A recent survey revealed seven men sharing each wash basin, 33 each bathtub, 34 each laundry tub, and 73 each telephone.

"Compensation board rules make such conditions illegal and punishable in logging and construction camps," he said.

URGENT NEED
Branding the Canadian public apathetic about the situation, Mr. Moore said the need is far greater and more urgent than most realized. Claiming that shortages of skilled university-trained men slowed down production in many parts of the country, Mr. Moore said: "If this situation is not rectified soon we shall gradually fall further and further behind other nations until our people end up hewers of wood and drawers of water."

"Money must be made available quickly to erect proper buildings, set up proper dormitories and residences for students from out of town, and pay faculty members a decent wage," Mr. Moore said.

"If money is not made available for these things, it means that students from outside communities will have to do without a university education," he said.

DEATH IN ELECTRIC CHAIR FOR BABY KIDNAP SLAYER

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP)—Angelo Lamacca, kidnaper of baby Peter Weinberger, Friday was sentenced to die in Sing Sing Prison's electric chair the week of Jan. 28.

Lamacca was convicted a week ago by a jury of 12 fathers of kidnapping and first-degree murder. The verdict carried a mandatory death penalty.

ASSAULT CHARGE REDUCED

Rifleman Admits Hitting Cab Woman

A 20-year-old soldier pleaded guilty in Oak Bay police court Friday to a reduced charge of assault causing bodily harm in connection with an attack on a woman cab driver, Nov. 24.

A more serious charge of indecent assault against Leonard Harper, QOR, was withdrawn.

Harper was advised by Magistrate H. C. Hall a week ago to obtain legal counsel as the result of information contained in a probation report.

Counsel Alan Macfarlane said Friday: "On the basis of the report and what he (Harper) has told me, I ask to change the plea to not guilty."

Prosecutor Alan Bigelow consented to the application and then asked to withdraw the indecent assault charge and substitute the lesser assault charge.

SECOND TIME
Harper pleaded guilty to the second charge.

It was the second time the charge of assault causing bodily harm had been read to him in connection with the incident.

Saanich police laid the original charge Nov. 24, the morning after Island Cab driver Mrs. Vera Rodgers was attacked on a lonely road near the Gordon Head army camp.

Subsequent investigations showed that the assault had occurred in Oak Bay. The Saanich charge was withdrawn and the indecent assault charge laid in Oak Bay court.

Mr. Macfarlane said Friday Harper had "no explanation to offer" for striking the woman.

Doctors Plan To Review Stand On Fluoridation

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The president-elect of the American Medical Association said Friday his group is reassessing its stand favoring fluoridation of drinking water.

Dr. David B. Allman, Atlantic City physician who will take over as head of the medical group next June, said a special five-man committee will report its fluoridation findings at some future AMA meeting.

He said feeling in the AMA is "not unanimous" on fluoridation but the "overwhelming majority" of the members are definitely of the opinion that fluoridation not only is safe but also beneficial for the improvement of dental health in children.

N.Z. to Harness Hot Springs To Get Power

Within two years it is likely New Zealand will harness the boiling hot springs in the "thermal" district of the island for power, Dr. Olga Jardine, who lived in N.Z., told the B.C. Retired Civil Servants' Association here Thursday.

When this comes about, it will make New Zealand the second country in the world to control hot springs for power use, the other being Italy, she said.

With hydroelectric power potential high in the country, it was turning from a purely pastoral land to a land of industry, Dr. Jardine reviewed other recent developments in New Zealand, and mentioned the reported increase in the native Maoris population.

ANIMALS AROUND US

Efficient Skeleton Key to Development

By DR. G. CLIFFORD CARL

In the present series we have been attempting to cover in a sketchy way all the groups in the Animal Kingdom, particularly those represented around southern Vancouver Island. Some of them are commonplace and known to everyone, some may be common enough but for one reason or another they have escaped the notice of all but a few especially interested persons. Still other representative animals may be quite rare or they may appear only at long intervals. These are the ones that carry a thrill for the observer.

Dr. Carl

In our review so far we have covered eleven of the thirteen major groups (called Phyla), namely the one-celled animals, the sponges, the jellyfishes and their kin, the comb-jellies, the flat-worms, the round worms, the molluscs, the starfish group, the molluscs and the true worms. There remain the arthropods and the chordates, the two great groups of animals that deserve as much attention and space as all the others put together because they are so extremely varied in their form and way of life and also because the latter group includes animals that have attained the highest development, namely the mammals.

As a brief preliminary bird's-eye view of these two important groups we should note that the arthropods include the crabs, shrimps, lobsters and other crustaceans, the great hosts of insects, the spiders, ticks and many other related forms, while the chordates are represented by primitive animals such as the sea-squirts and lancelets, the more progressive fishes, amphibians, reptiles, birds and finally mammals including man.

How the arthropods and the chordates came to be dominant forms is probably a matter for conjecture. No doubt many features have combined to give animals of these groups a distinct advantage over the "lower" forms. If one factor only had to be picked out as being mainly responsible it would be the possession of an efficient skeleton. The skeleton acting as a supporting structure has enabled those creatures to make tremendous advances including the invasion of the land and the air.

TWO DISTINCT GROUPS

True, certain of the lower forms had already evolved a skeleton of sorts. Many of the hydroids and moss animals encase themselves in tubes and so do numbers of sedentary worms but these structures serve mainly as a protective cover. Most starfishes and all the sea urchins and sea lilies are encased in shelly plates which serve both as a protective cover and also for attachment of muscles and other organs but this type of skeleton never enabled these animals to leave the water possibly because movable joints were not evolved or possibly because these creatures failed to develop a head end.

Fruit Probe Next Year, Says Chetwynd

The B.C. cabinet has agreed to appoint a royal commission to probe the Okanagan fruit industry early next year. Agriculture Minister Ralph Chetwynd said Friday.

Mr. Chetwynd said Federal Agriculture Minister James Gardiner turned down B.C.'s request for a joint federal-provincial royal commission, but said members of his department would be willing to give testimony before a provincial commission.

"I cannot say yet who will be appointed as commissioner," Mr. Chetwynd said.

"We have two or three people in mind and will reach a decision next week. The commissioner does not necessarily have to be a law court judge."

SAFETY HINTS

Christmas Trees Can Be Deadly

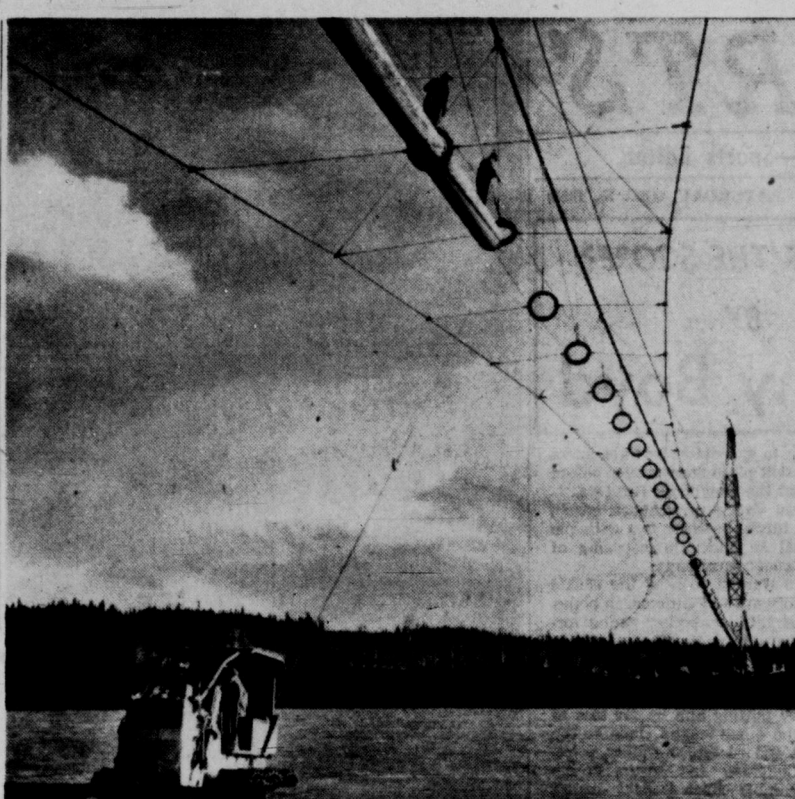

Householders and city firemen will have a happier, safer time this Christmas if the safety rules are followed, Fire Chief Frank Briers said today.

Here are some tips: Store tree out of doors until actually needed; don't use a tree bigger than actually necessary; cut the base at an angle and support it securely in a tub of water; keep the tree away from exits, fireplaces, radiators and stoves; don't smoke or light matches near the tree.

Use few decorations, and of fireproof materials when possible; use only approved decorative lighting, keep light bulbs clear of combustibles; make certain all lights are off when leaving the house.

Never use candles or open flame lighting devices; don't let gift wrapping accumulate, put it in a trash can as soon as possible.

Keep a fire extinguisher or pail of water handy; remove tree and decorations as soon as they have served their purpose.

Long Term Advance in Uraniums Seen as Ottawa Lifts Secrecy Veil

By RON ANDREWS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

There was little change in prices of the Canadian stock markets this week but two developments midway through the week raised hopes that a year-end rally might be in the making.

Profit-taking was the rule during the first three sessions but an advance in the last two days, sparked by the announcements, left markets in a favorable position. The outstanding news break came from Ottawa Wednesday and it could mean a long-term advance among uranium.

The Canadian government lifted the veil of secrecy which had surrounded the uranium industry until now. Information about uranium reserves and production are being made public for the first time.

The other development was announced by two of Canada's four primary iron and steel producers, Algoma Steel Corp. and Dominion Steel and Coal Corp. revealed Tuesday that they have expansion plans calculated to add about 10 per cent to the country's present steel-making potential of 5,160,000 tons a year.

ANNOUNCEMENTS GOOD

Observers viewed the uranium announcement with much optimism.

They said investors now have a chance of appraising any one individual company. Before secrecy regulations were relaxed, the investor did not know whether he was making a good buy or bad buy on the market.

Market experts said the development probably will bring in a group of buyers who up to this point had refused to place money in something about which they lacked vital information.

No what figures on tonnage, recovery and dollar value can be published, investors can determine the price companies receive from the federal government for their product. This had been high on the secret list.

Because of the variations in price schedules for Canadian production, observers said it isn't easy to put a dollar valuation on reserves. But they said "it is fairly safe to guess the total might be in the excess of $4,000,000,000, most of it in the Algoma basin-Blind River camp in Ontario."

Trading was quiet on the markets, especially during the profit-taking.

At Montreal, 257,261 industrial shares and 2,289,834 mining shares were exchanged against 442,895 industrials and 3,465,572 mines the previous week.

U.S. Sales Lag Behind Boom In Industry

By WALTER BREEDE, Jr.

NEW YORK (AP) — Booming production in United States factories, mines and oil fields this week contrasted sharply with lagging sales in retail outlets.

Christmas shoppers were still holding back. And merchants, who in past weeks had blamed everything from the stock market to the weather man, were unable to say why.

Total retail volumes for the week as measured by Dun and Bradstreet failed to match the record levels of a year ago.

In most other key sectors of the economy this week, the latest reports spelled "B-O-O-M" in capital letters.

Steel production was scheduled at 2,511,000 tons — the highest weekly output in history.

WHAT'S THE SCORE?

BY

Denny Boyd

Since it doesn't cost anything to speculate, here's a guess that Art Chapman will wait until that place freezes over before he gets any more player help from the New York Rangers.

The story goes that Chapman, Vancouver Canucks coach, cut his own throat and, possibly, future business ties with the Rangers with a many-angled deal he pulled in disposing of rookie forward Gordy Redahl, a Ranger farm hand.

The yarn goes that Chapman wanted to send the rookie forward to Penticton, in hopes of getting another young forward from the V's.

In order to get rid of Redahl, Chapman had to have him waived out of the WHL by putting him up for sale to the other league clubs at the standard $2,000 waiver price. Chapman felt secure in his gamble since Redahl hadn't shown anything that would prompt the other clubs in the league parting with two grand for his services.

Next, Chapman put Redahl on the voluntarily retired list, under which any team in the league could pick him up for $750. Again Chapman felt no fear of having to follow through.

But, much to Chapman's horror, the Winnipeg Warriors forked over $750 and claimed Redahl.

Even though Redahl didn't belong to him, Chapman was obliged to complete the transaction with the Warriors.

Now, all Chapman has to do is explain to the Ranger brass how he contrived to sell one of their players, without their sanction or knowledge, at the rock-bottom price of $750. And the word is that the Rangers are hopping mad.

Curly Leachman, one-time Commercial League player and a product of Victoria's minor leagues, is developing a taste for tea and Yorkshire pudding as a member of the Wembley Lions in the English Hockey League.

Curly, in a recent letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mike Leachman, sent along a Wembley program which described him, in proper British reserve, as "the nemesis of opposing forwards, with elbow and knee."

The Lions currently are on a tour of Europe and Curly will be in Stockholm for Christmas and Helsinki for New Year. Other stops they will make are France, Germany, Norway, Belgium and Luxembourg.

Shrine officials, who are laying tentative plans to hold next year's East-West all-star game before the start of the football season, had better figure on doing without members of the Edmonton Eskimos.

I tested Esk coach Pop Ivy on his views of such a possibility after this month's game and Ivy was dead against a pre-season game.

"I know the Shrine people are up against a lot of problems, but I couldn't see it to let my players take part in a pre-season game. I would have to let them away from our own training camp for one or two weeks and we would run the risk of an injury that could wreck us for the whole season."

"Just imagine where we would be if Jackie Parker or Normie Kwong or Frankie Anderson was badly injured in an exhibition game before the season started!"

Pedagogues Hand Totems Hoop Lesson

Victoria High School Totems suffered their fifth defeat in six games as Victoria Pedagogues handed them a 68-60 basketball lesson at the Vic High Friday night.

Pedagogues, a team composed of teachers from the Victoria area, were never pressed as they showed their daytime students that they still had lots to learn on the basketball court as well as in the classroom.

High scorer for the teachers was Len Anderson, with 15 points. Dick Austin hooped a like number for the losers, while John Devlin added 14 points to the Totem total.

In a preliminary senior "B" men's exhibition contest, Morris defeated Rose Fuel, 46-39.

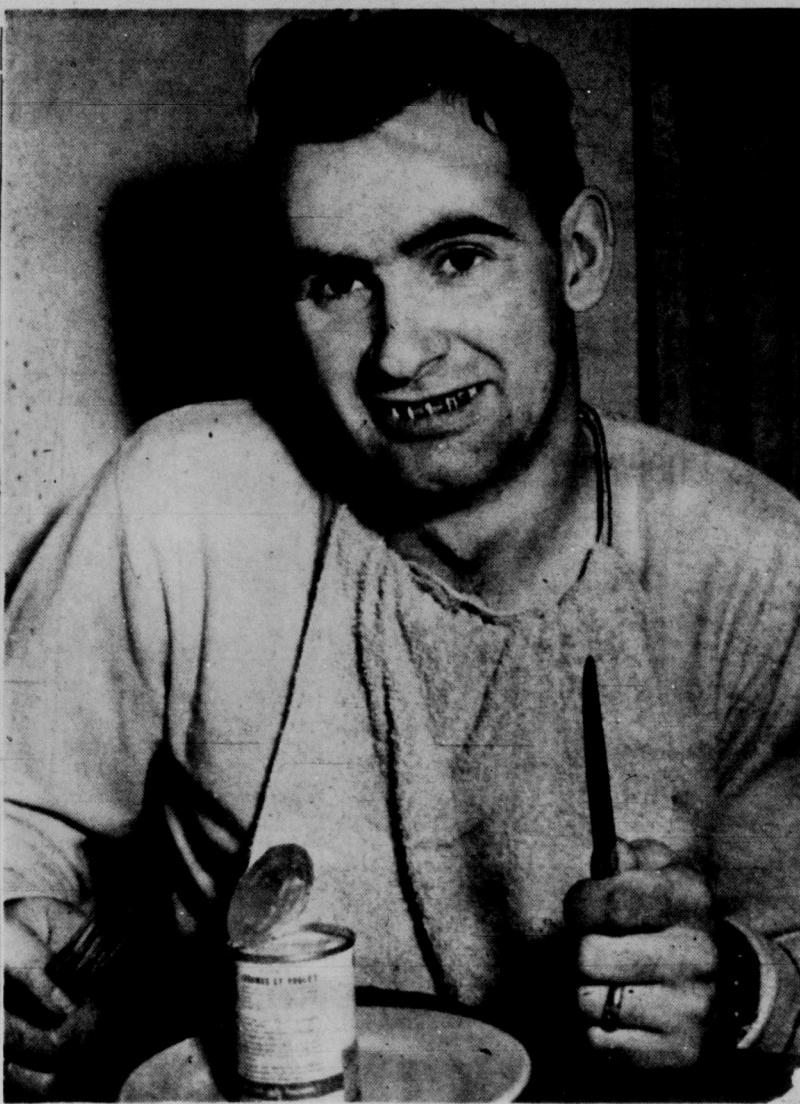

Final Postponed Until New Year

Third and deciding match of the high school senior soccer final between Oak Bay and Victoria High has been postponed until early January.

Final match of the series, which has repeatedly been the victim of weather conditions, would conflict with exams if played before classes resume in the new year.

Each team has scored one victory in the series.

Davis Cup Final Set As Yanks Oust India

PERTH, Australia (AP)—Bill Talbert's gamble of pairing Vic Seixas' tennis experience with the power and enthusiasm of young Sam Giammalva paid off today as the U.S. Davis Cup pair thrashed India in doubles to win the inter-zone finals and a place in the challenge round against Australia's defending champions.

Giammalva, a bowlegged Texan squarely on the spot, contributed more than his share as the U.S. tandem won 6-2, 3-6, 6-4, 6-4, from India's Ramana-then Krishnan and Naresk Kumar.

The victory, coupled with Friday's final two singles triumphs by Seixas and Herbie Flam, gave the Americans a 3-0 lead in the best-of-five series and made a formality of Sunday's final two singles matches.

Talbert, the U.S. captain, called the play of 33-year-old Vic and 22-year-old Sam "a pleasing performance," then said he would substitute another youngster, 19-year-old Mike Green of Miami Beach, Fla., for Seixas against Krishnan in the first singles Sunday.

LUCKY, SAYS FLAM
Flam, who felt he was "lucky" to beat Krishnan on opening day, was to have met Kumar in the other singles, but Talbert later asked permission to substitute Giammalva for Flam and received the okay from Kumar.

Giammalva, told just before the match by Talbert that the doubles represented his big test, responded with excellent play. He returned service brilliantly and pulled off numerous winners, although his forceful style forced him into several errors.

GOAL EXPLOSION
ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP)—Rochester Americans exploded for five goals in the second period Friday night—three within 82 seconds—to defeat Buffalo Bisons, 6-4, in an American League hockey game.

Finstewald, the Bedford Heights, Ohio, pro, who says he is playing his best golf since 1950, couldn't match Fetchik's sizzling 63 but did turn in a 67 to rank second at 131. Charles (Chuck) Malchaski of Addison, Ill., and Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, were tied for third place at 132 each.

Fetchik, dropping 20-foot putts like one-footers, scored birdies on the second, third and ninth holes to make the turn in 33. Then he soared home with birdies on the 11th, 13th, 15th and 18th holes to finish his Mayfair in course record equalling round.

Following Stranahan and Lanchaski were Jay Hebert of San Angelo, Tex., at 133 each.

Al Balding of Toronto barely squeaked under the qualifying wire Friday in the second round of his defense.

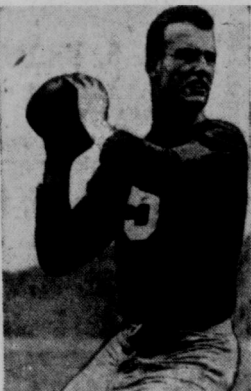

Balding, when won the inaugural Sanford Open last year and $2,400 first prize, shot a three-over-par 73 to bring his second round total to 141—qualifying mark for the 66 pros who will play the final holes today and Sunday. He is 13 strokes back of the leader.

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UP)—The football future of Paul Hornung still hung in midair today while the former Notre Dame star pondered pro offers.

Hornung held conferences with Green Bay Packers officials yesterday but refused to discuss the outcome of the talks. It was noted, however, that Hornung did not sign any contracts.

Hornung is believed to be pondering offers from Canadian football teams, principally B.C. Lions, which won Canadian draft rights to the all-American quarterback.

The Packers were awarded draft rights to Hornung in the National Football League. He was a bonus pick.

Cats Edge Royals; Protest Possible

Brown Gets Hat-Trick; Cats in Third Place

Victoria 6, New Westminster 4

By DENNY BOYD

Victoria Cougars made a few less mistakes than the New Westminster Royals in a flamboyant game of mumbly-peg at Memorial Arena Friday night and moved into third place in the WHL's coast division, unwelcome co-tenants with the Vancouver Canucks.

Cougars clubbed the Royals, 6-4 Friday night in a game where omission prevailed over commission and moved into a third-place tie with Canucks, who blew one to Seattle Americans and had to settle for a 4-4 tie.

Royal's coach Hal Laycoe was hoping that, with one telephone call this morning, he could wipe away all of his club's Friday night errors.

Laycoe said he planned to contact league president Al Leader this morning to sound out justification of a New Westminster protest on the game, based on a second-period penalty call that had everyone concerned going in circles, particularly referee Joey Johns.

With Roy Partridge in the penalty box, Johns gave Bill Dobbey and Bob Roberge roughing penalties and tagged an additional minor on Roberge for elbowing.

It appeared that the Cougars should have played short-handed for 38 seconds, until Partridge's penalty expired; that the clubs should have been all even on the ice while Dobbey and Roberge served their roughing penalties and that the Cougars should have had the advantage after Dobbey left the box and Roberge started his elbowing penalty.

But Johns let both clubs play out the penalties all even and that is what Laycoe feels he can protest.

Laycoe said, "I just couldn't figure how Joey came to his decision so I am going to phone Mr. Leader in the morning. I will protest if we have grounds. Things having fallen neatly into place for them, Cougars move into Seattle tonight with a glorious opportunity to hog the third spot to themselves and drop the Canucks into the dungeon."

It was a bit of a near thing for the Cougars Friday night as they contrived to blow a 3-0 lead they had laboriously constructed early in the game. But the Cats came skittering back in the last six minutes of the game to snap a 4-4 tie. Doug Macauley scoring the winner, his second goal of the night, and Wayne Brown bunkering the fire with his third goal.

Cougars came precariously close to blowing the duke by letting Gordie Fashway having the run of the premises.

Fashway is like a hungry pan-handler—let him hang around your door-step too long and he will eat you out of house and home. In a rash display of charity, the Cats let Fashway unmarked on Marcel Pelletier's stoop on several occasions and the big guy, who has scored more WHL goals than any other player in history, added three more to his total. Bob Roberge was off for hooking at 6:59 of the first period when Brown declared war on the Royals. He glided down the right side and when defenceman Bob Bergeron let down for a second, Brown whistled a blaster that needed into the topmost corner of the short side.

Brown's second goal was scored when Bruce Carmichael shot inches wide on a break, the puck coming out to Brown who slammed it in while Tibbs was sprawled half in his net and half out.

Macauley intercepted a pass by the unfortunate Bergeron, who had a bad night all-round, went past the goal and beat Tibbs neatly with a chipped back-hander at 6:28 of the second.

Fashway's first goal was a typical Fashway product. Left uncovered by the side of the net, he shovelled Bobby Love's crease pass behind Pelletier before the Cougar defence could cover him.

Fashway carrommed another unhampered shot off Pelletier's pads to make it a sticky 3-2 at 2:37 of the third but Roy Partridge, the rookie forward playing emergency defence, scored his second goal of the season to make it 4-2. Partridge got in close and made a fake that saw Bergeron (him again) and Tibbs collide and fall in a heap as the puck slid home.

Prosperity turned to near bankruptcy quickly for the Cougars as the Royals tied it up with two goals in less than three minutes. Fashway, all alone again, had time to tee his shot up before whacking it behind Pelletier and Argie Kuklowski, sent away by Steve Hyman, raced in to score from the centre line, tying it at 4-4.

When Brown skated to the Cougar bench to stop up the blood with a towel, Johns gave him a penalty for delaying the game, even though the injury required the services of a first aid man as Brown sat in the penalty box. After the game, Brown vowed he will bleed to death next time, just to be on the safe side.

Earlier in the game, Brown and Johns had been involved in bawling bit on nonsense. Brown was bilied over the ear by Bobby Love's stick, the blow splitting his ear lobe.

BIG CHRISTMAS STOCKING READY

Like a monstrous Jacob's coat, the multi-colored world's largest Christmas stocking—50 feet from toe to toe—was ready today for hanging from the ceiling in Memorial Arena at Victoria Kinsmen Club giant bingo game Monday at 8 p.m. Fair Isle Knitting employees stretched the wool along Johnson Street before inserting the stocking's wire frame. Kinsmen and bingo players will fill it with toys for underprivileged children. A total 6,000 of 7,500 bingo tickets have been sold. (Times Photo.)

BETWEEN TIMES By MONTE ROBERTS

I was saddened to learn of the demise of Collier's magazine, which died of an overdose of red ink despite an amazingly healthy circulation.

Collier's was 68 years old at the time of its death, so, I suppose, in a way, it had just about lived out its three-score-years-and-ten.

But it is sad, nevertheless, for we who knew it when. My own acquaintance with Collier's goes back something less than 30 years, when it was a weekly—rather skinny and undernourished in the back pages, but lively, at that.

At that time, of course, the price was five cents. And somewhere around that time Macfadden Publications launched Liberty, also a five-cent weekly, and the standard drug-store witticism was "Give me Liberty or give me Collier's."

I have a soft spot in my heart for Collier's for several reasons.

One of them was the early recognition given Damon Runyon. Whether or not it was the first magazine to publish Runyon, I don't know. But I do know he used to appear—not often enough, mind you—at frequent intervals.

Corey Ford and Alistair McBain (wish they were still a writing team) almost converted me to reading outdoor writing via the pages of Collier's. And Luke Short in those days was proving that the western story could be the frame for solid writing.

Incidentally, the issue of Collier's now on the stands features a reprint of one of Runyon's earliest hard-boiled sentimental. And also the first installment of a Luke Short serial, which will end I know not where.

But my fondest recollection of Collier's is this: From it I received my very first hand-written rejection.

As every beginning writer knows, it is easy to collect a printed rejection slip, which usually states: "This does not necessarily mean your work lacks merit," and actually means your stuff didn't get past the first reader.

But when the beginning writer receives his first written or individually typed rejection, containing constructive criticism, he knows he is on the way.

Thus you can imagine the great lift to my spirits which resulted from a HAND-WRITTEN rejection from this great national magazine.

I can remember it now, almost word for word:

"This pseudo-Runyon effort is just about the worst I have ever seen and indicates a weak mind with no talent whatever for writing."

Ah, dear Collier's, and dear unknown reader in the fiction department.

George Davis New Commodore Of Motorboatmen

New commodore of the Victoria Inboard-Outboard Association is George E. Davis, member of the association for more than 15 years and official announcer at nearly all local and Vancouver Island race meets.

As a club member he has served as vice-commodore, secretary, and director.

On his executive will be George Baldwin, vice-commodore, inboards; Fred Graham, vice-commodore, outboards; Ed Dyer, secretary; Charles Mullins, treasurer; and Robert Bullivant and Ron Carlos, trustees.

Major events planned by the club for the 1957 racing season are a May 24th regatta for inboards and outboards, and the Western Canada championships on Labor Day.

Famed Sikh Defender Visits Here

The man who helped to halt deportation of Canadian Sikhs to British Honduras in 1909, was scheduled to arrive in Victoria today to take part in the Sikh community's Christmas religious ceremonies starting Sunday.

Seventy-nine-year-old Sant Teja Singh, lawyer, distinguished scholar in English and former professor of a Hindu University, who now is devoted to a religious life, is on a "Gospel" mission to British Columbia.

He will speak at the Sikh Temple next week. Arrangements are also being made for him to deliver a public lecture.

Sant Teja Singh took an active part in defending the Sikh immigrants during the 1908-9 race riots in Vancouver when a large section of the population demanded that all Orientals be deported from the country.

People at the time protested the importation of cheap labor into Canada and asked Ottawa to send the Sikhs and Japanese to British Honduras.

The Indian became spokesman for the Sikhs and opposed the deportation movement in Ottawa. He asked the British Government to intervene and it was largely due to his efforts that no measures were taken to send East Indians to the British colony.

Regarded as many as a "saint," Sant Teja Singh has led a life which in many ways is similar to the life of Gandhi. He fought for Indian rights, established schools and religious colleges and attempted to promote a better understanding between Christianity and eastern religions.

Born in Punjab in 1877, Sant Teja Singh graduated from the Government College, Lahore, in 1898. In 1901 he became a qualified lawyer and a year later received his MA degree.

In England, he took higher studies at the University of Cambridge and University College, London.

It was through his efforts the Sikh temples in Victoria, Stockton, Calif., and London, Eng., were built.

'We'll Be Home For Christmas' —Sudbury Crew

"Home for Christmas" is the watchword aboard the Victoria deep-sea salvage tug Sa Sudbury today, as she steams through heavy seas in the west.

Program will include four student choirs, Oak Bay Schools Band, choir, Oak Bay Schools Band, Oak Bay Hand-Bell Ringers, dance presentations, a one-act Christmas play and community singing with the band.

Victoria police have asked public assistance in locating George McInnes, about 60, believed living in the city.

He is sought by a sister, Mrs. Maud L. Corson of Revelstoke. Police said McInnes previously worked at Yarrow's shipyards and lived at 412 Dallas Road before moving to the St. James Hotel three years ago.

Victoria Boat Taken in Tow

The Victoria pleasure craft Cape Clear was taken in tow by the tug La Garde early today after running out of fuel in Active Pass, between Galiano and Mayne Islands, according to Canadian Press.

Aboard were Clifford Petrie of Victoria and an unidentified companion. A distress call was sent out after the boat began to drift in a 30-mile blow.

The call was picked up by RCAF search and rescue squadron at Vancouver and the La Garde, owned by Vancouver Tow Boat Co., was dispatched. A tow line was affixed at about 2 a.m., and the Cape Clear towed to Vancouver.

1,800 Phones Knocked Out In Fairfield

Water Seepage Hits Underground Cable

B.C. Telephone Co. crewmen were working shortly before noon today trying to locate trouble in a cable between Yates and Fort on Ormond which knocked out 1,800 telephones in the Fairfield district.

The phones started going dead immediately after 4 p.m. Friday and the situation became progressively worse. Workmen have been endeavoring to locate the exact trouble site since 7 a.m. today.

Trouble was in an underground cable, believed to have a hole in it which has filled with water seepage.

The work was slowed when flooded manholes leading to the cables had to be pumped out before inspection started.

DON'T KNOW WHEN

Company officials could offer no predictions as to when service would be resumed.

Meanwhile, rain which started at 8:30 p.m. Friday and let up shortly before 11 a.m. today, was expected to spit sporadically over the weekend. But there will be no continued heavy rain.

During the night and through to mid-morning today, about three-quarters of an inch fell. Described by the weatherman as "a good rain," it was not enough to start repetition of the flooding experienced at the beginning of the week, although low-lying areas were beginning to fill up.

DUFFEL BAGS BULGE

Sailor 'Santas' Home Again

There was a gay yuletide atmosphere at HMCS Naden Friday when the big training cruiser HMCS Ontario nosed alongside the jetty after her last cruise for 1956.

About 500 friends and relatives of crew members—with a heavy representation of tiny tots—lined the jetty as the Naden band played the ship home with "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town."

When the gangways were down at 3 p.m., they clambered aboard the ship, locating husbands and fathers and trying to pry loose Christmas secrets.

"You'll have to wait for Santa," was the standard answer as mysterious parcels were loaded into duffel bags.

Most asked question: "Will you be on duty Christmas?"

The cruise took the ship first to northern B.C. ports, then to San Francisco.

Across Esquimalt harbor other ships of the Pacific Command sported Christmas trees at their foremasts and other decorations concealing the grim weapons of their trade.

HMCS James Bay returned to HMC Dockyard today, last ship back before Christmas, and naval ship movements will be at a standstill until the new year.

Older Boys' Parliament In Victoria Dec. 27-30

Youths between the ages of 16 and 21 will hold a full-scale parliament in the B.C. Legislature Dec. 27-30.

They are members of the Older Boys' Parliament sponsored by the Inter-Church Parliamentary Committee of Vancouver.

W. A. Neen has been named premier for the session and Douglas Norman will act as leader of the opposition. A lieutenant-governor has still to be appointed.

Two-Cent Boost Starts In Vancouver on Monday

An increase in retail milk prices in the Victoria area is expected to follow increases announced in Vancouver today by the Dairyland Division of the Fraser Valley Milk Producers' Association.

Starting Monday, the association will increase the price of milk delivered to homes on the mainland by two cents a quart, while the price of wholesale milk to stores will go up three cents a quart.

But no increase in Victoria prices is likely before the New Year, a spokesman for the Victoria Pasteurized Milk Distributors' Association said.

WAGES KEY
"We have made no move as yet to raise prices," he added. "What we decide to do will depend on our forthcoming negotiations with the Milk Drivers' and Dairy Employees' Union." An official of the Milk

Power Supply Contract Ends In Three Years

A contract between B.C. Electric for the supply of power by the commission to the lower end of Vancouver Island will be terminated Oct. 1, 1959, "by mutual agreement," both utilities announced today.

At present the B.C. Electric takes 37,000 kilowatts from the commission. The power will be "recaptured" by the commission in two steps, the first to take place Oct. 1, 1958, when 17,000 kilowatts will be surrendered.

The balance will be taken back by the commission a year later. Both utilities said the new 132,000-volt B.C. Electric undersea cable from the mainland to the island was the main factor in making conclusion of the contract possible.

It has been in effect since 1949 and demand has increased during negotiations every two years to the present delivery by the power commission of 37,000 kilowatts.

The existing interconnection between the BCE and power commission systems at Stratford, near Duncan, will be continued for the interchange of electricity whenever desirable and possible, and as an emergency standby for both utilities.

Yule Lights Judging Set Next Week

With only ten more days to Christmas, many Victorians will spend the weekend decorating the outside of their homes with sparkling lights and ornaments for the city's annual Christmas decorating contest.

The contest, sponsored by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, has nearly 55 entries to date. Peter Brown, contest committee chairman, said judging of decorated homes in six different classes, will take place between December 20 and 25.

A group of six judges have been selected.

He also announced a large Nativity scene which the Jaycees are constructing at the Klwanis old age pensioners' village, will be completed by Wednesday of next week.

Since the Jaycees sponsored the contest six years ago, Victoria has become, on a per capita basis, the most decorated city in Canada.

Hefty Thieves Take Safe Holding $450

Strongbox Weighed 375 Pounds

Thieves who lugged a 375-pound safe from a Gorge Road service station overnight escaped with $450.

Safnich police said the Gorge Road Auto Service office, at Gorge and Wasana, was broken into sometime between 10 p.m. and 4 a.m.

The theft was discovered on a routine police patrol check.

The front door had been forced open by a pinchbar used to splinter a panel beside the lock. The office was lighted only from a neon sign outside.

TWO MEN NEEDED

Detective Joe Armstrong said it would take at least two men to lift the safe, which is 30 inches high and 18 inches across, and grey in color.

It was apparently hoisted into a car or truck outside the office. The safe contained $400 in bills and $50 in rolls of coins.

FAMILY COURT 'GREAT NEED'

Delinquent Girl Moved to Poetry

By DINAH KERR

Victoria needs a family court to deal with potential young criminals, according to Col. W. S. Dingley, supervisor of the Juvenile Foster Home on Coldharbour Road here.

The court should be established in conjunction with the juvenile court as a "major step" towards curbing outbursts of juvenile delinquency and teenage rowdiness, he said.

Cases would be dealt with in private enabling parents to get advice and help without going to the police.

"Parents often won't report their children to the police until the situation gets out of hand," he said. "If Victoria had a family court acting in a preventive capacity a lot of cases need never reach juvenile court."

Broken Homes

Eighty per cent of juvenile delinquency is caused by broken homes, Col. Dingley pointed out.

"There should be some kind of court for senile delinquents, too," he said. "They cause juvenile delinquency. Children who get a decent break at home usually don't get into trouble."

Col. and Mrs. Dingley have been supervisors of the juvenile home for 10 years. They've sheltered more than 1,000 boys and girls awaiting trial in juvenile court.

They've developed a philosophy about kids.

Firm, Honest

"You can't legislate them," said the colonel. "We take them as we find them. You've got to be firm and just and honest. The odd youngster won't respond but I've never been called upon to use force."

He admitted to boxing a boy's ears once "just to give him a gentle reminder that he mustn't tell lies."

"As a rule the kids come in with a chip on their shoulders," he said. "If you sit tight and say nothing he'll usually tell you his story, but if you ask him right off the bat, he'll lie."

Bath First

Weapons are removed and the teenagers are given a bath as soon as they're admitted.

Some still manage to destroy the furniture in the recreation room and scribble obscenities on books and walls.

Girls are the worst offenders, says Mrs. Dingley.

Just recently one girl was placed in the freshly-painted "cubbyhole" for misbehavior.

U.S. Turkeys Flood Market; Island Producers Protesting

Vancouver Island turkey raisers said today the "bottom has been knocked out of their business" due to a flood of bird imports from the United States for Christmas.

Producers are receiving 31 cents a pound (live weight) for birds 18 lbs. and under, and 28 cents for birds over 18 lbs., they said. Last December prices were 40 and 32 cents per lb.

"There is no profit for the producer in these prices," said one turkey raiser. "The price is just enough to cover cost of feed and other expenses for raising the birds."

A United Church youth rally on the theme "Venture in Faith" will be held here in January.

Tentative dates are Jan. 2 and 3, and plans include a party, followed by a discussion on youth and religion. Rev. E. Laura Butler will speak on the rally theme.

Youth leaders were scheduled to meet in First United Church this morning to make final plans.

A variety show by the Victoria Girls' Drill Corps will be presented at 8 p.m. next Wednesday in the Club Sirocco.

A government official confirmed that today on a market is receiving U.S. birds. This was affecting the island's turkey industry, he said.

"Imports are allowed in," he said, "because B.C. does not produce quite enough turkeys for the needs of the population."

He said 6,500,000 turkeys have so far been shipped from the United States into Canada. The bulk of these went to British Columbia and Ontario.

Four persons were injured, none seriously, Friday night when two cars collided on Parson's Bridge on the old island highway.

RCMP said the cars were driven by C. N. Butler, 302 Zealous Crescent, and Alfred Victor Peatt, Sooke.

Butler was treated at HMCS Naden hospital for abrasions and released.

Peatt, his wife, and passenger Robert Wishart, Colwood P.O., were treated for cuts and bruises at Royal Jubilee Hospital and released.

HUTCHISON REPORTS

Quebec Key For Diefenbaker

By BRUCE HUTCHISON, Editor, The Times

OTTAWA—After the whoopla of the Conservative convention and a storm of personal emotion which almost reduced him to tears, John Diefenbaker today faces the hard facts of politics and those facts are centred in Quebec.

His problem as a national party leader has many facets and many obstacles but his primary task is to break the solid Liberal hold on French Canada. It is only reporting obvious facts which Mr. Diefenbaker knows quite well, to say that he starts his march into Quebec under unnesarily difficult auspices. The convention made sure of that.

The real anatomy of the convention and its possible results in national politics became clear as soon as the delegates met. Mr. Diefenbaker clearly had a majority of votes in his pocket but he had practically none in Quebec. The French Canadian delegation came here determined to stop the Diefenbaker band wagon and, if possible, to elect Donald Fleming on a second vote after David Fulton had been eliminated.

Hutchison

Openly Attacked by Balcer

The opposition to Mr. Diefenbaker in Quebec was so strong that Leon Balcer, the most prominent French Canadian leader and president of the National Conservative Association, openly attacked the favorite son of the Prairies. In an almost unbelievable act of party division Mr. Balcer condemned Mr. Diefenbaker for refusing to allow a French Canadian to second his nomination. This, in Mr. Balcer's opinion, was an affront to the French Canadian race. Of course it was not so intended. Mr. Diefenbaker had invited Premier Fleming of New Brunswick and General Peckles, V.C. to nominate him and thought he had thus indicated his strength from sea to sea. The Quebec delegation did not take it this way and probably cast few votes for Mr. Diefenbaker, though the ballot was secret.

Coalition With Socreds?

In accepting the leadership amidst scenes of wild enthusiasm, Mr. Diefenbaker spoke appropriately in generalities. A few moments later he got down to facts before a battery of tough newspapermen and at his first press conference he handled himself superbly. His opening sentences seemed to establish the issue on which he proposes to fight the next election—the re-establishment of the two party system and the restoration of parliament's ancient liberties. They are sound valid and vote-getting issues, far more important than most of the planks in the party platform.

BRITISH SEIZE 1,000 IN SUEZ CRACK DOWN

Terrorists Bomb UNEF Patrol Jeep

By LEONARD EDDINGTON

PORT SAID (AP)—British military authorities today seized every man, woman and child in a five-square block area in a new "get-tough" search for a kidnapped lieutenant and warned that Egyptian guerrilla attacks might provoke the British into "really violent action."

(British United Press, reported the British troops seized close to 1,000 Egyptians in the raids.)

Lt. Gen. Sir Hugh Stockwell, commander of the Anglo-French force, whose withdrawal from Egypt is being harassed by guerrilla and rocket attacks, sent a letter of protest to the commander of the new United Nations Emergency Force demanding that the Egyptian authorities call off what he described as "a co-ordinated and sustained campaign of violence."

Stockwell insisted: "I reserve to myself the right to take whatever action I deem necessary for the security of the forces under my command."

Stockwell gave Maj. Gen. E. L. M. Burns a long list of "flagrant breaches of the cease-fire agreement" and said there were 11 separate grenade throwing incidents in the last 24 hours "including the use of rocket launchers." One Egyptian was killed.

British troops also sealed off the port area and the European quarter with a barbed wire barrier.

'Slaughter . . . Last Thing I Want to Do'

"I think that will stop people coming in here to pitch grenades," Stockwell told reporters. "That would lead to us having to take really violent action."

"The last thing I want to do on God's earth is to slaughter a lot of people."

Stockwell said he is combing out the five-square block area where a car in which 20-year-old Lieut. Anthony Moorhouse was kidnapped was found abandoned.

There was no word where he might be or whether he is dead or alive.

While the search was underway in the northwest sector of town, Egyptian guerrillas attacked again in the southwest sector, tossing a grenade off the roof of a building into a UN jeep. Norwegian UN forces fired back.

Meanwhile, the departure of troops from Port Said appeared to be going at full speed. The British aircraft carrier Theseus sailed for England at dawn this morning with 1,100 British troops.

At El Ballah, United Nations tally to 27.

Birmingham Scores Upset

LONDON (CP)—Centre forward Eddie Brown slammed in two quick goals today to lead Birmingham City to a 3-1 upset victory over Manchester United, First Division leader in the English soccer league.

It was their third defeat in 21 games this season but they still lead by three points with a total of 32 points.

Second-place Tottenham Hotspur scrambled to a 1-1 tie in a home match against Preston and now has 29 points. Blackpool, playing without star winger Stanley Matthews, romped to a 4-2 victory over Bolton and boosted its points tally to 27.

FOG BLOCKS SEARCH FOR LOST AIRLINER

(See Also, Page 3)

For the sixth straight day bad weather today gripped the mountains of the mainland, preventing a mass air search 110 miles northeast of Victoria for an airliner missing since late Sunday with 62 persons aboard.

Fog prevailed over the Hope area and there was moderate to severe icing and freezing rain in the cloud above.

Fifty search aircraft were held to the ground.

Yule Shopping Reaches Peak In Crowded City

Traffic-snarled streets, crowded sidewalks, tight-packed store aisles today pointed to one of the busiest Christmas seasons in Victoria's history.

Friday was payday for thousands of citizens, and from store opening time today they rushed downtown to lay in stocks of presents, food, decorations, and the tinsel and baubles of Yuletide.

Clerks in many major retail outlets didn't have time to talk between running from buyer to buyer.

Many stores said today was the heaviest buying day so far this year, and expect it to top even next Saturday.

Early Voting Slowed by Rain

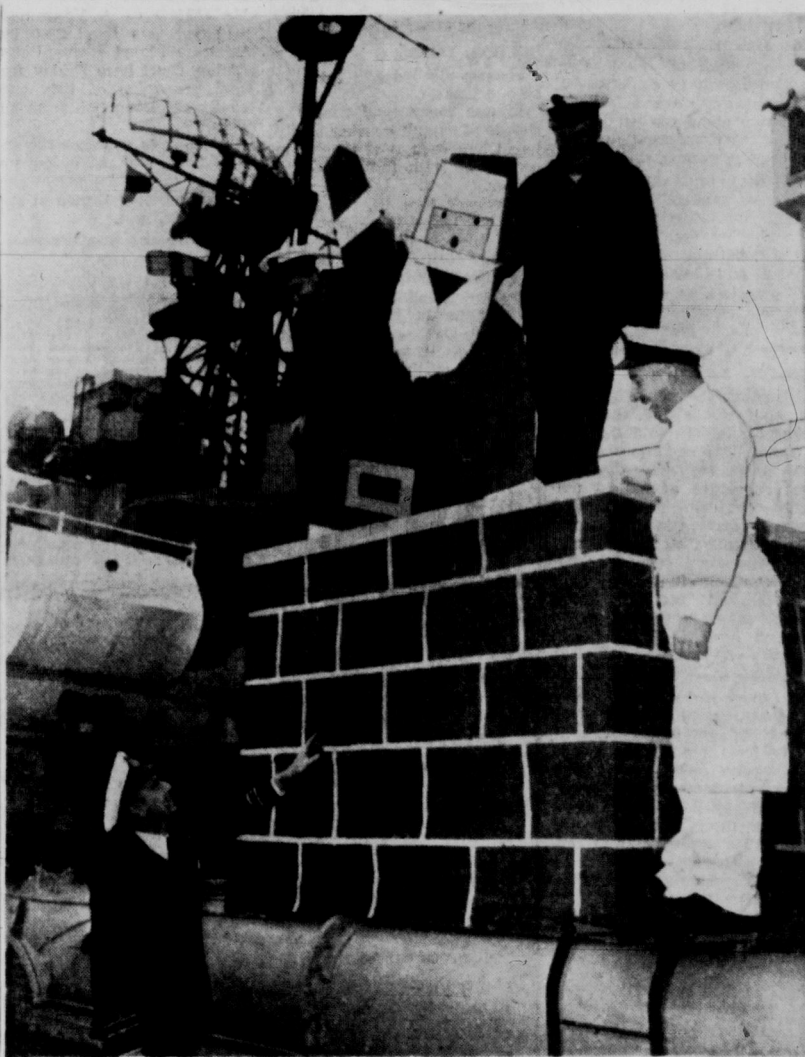

Rain put the damper on early voting in Greater Victoria's three municipalities as annual elections for council and one police commission got under way.

Brightening skies this afternoon were expected to bring out more voters before polls close at 8 p.m.

A total estimated 950 voters out of 19,839 eligible went to Saanich polls in the first 3½ hours of balloting to 11:30 a.m.

At Oak Bay municipal hall, 664 voters had cast ballots to noon. There are 7,000 eligible voters.

In Esquimalt, where polls are set up at the municipal hall and 855 Craigflower, a light vote was recorded to noon. There are 3,328 eligible.

TCA Atlantic Airliner Limpes Into London on Three Engines

LONDON (CP) — A Trans-Canada Air Lines Super-Constellation landed safely at London airport today on three of its four engines.

The plane left Montreal Friday night with 61 passengers and a crew of eight.

"We had a bumpy journey over the Atlantic—even before the engine cut out," one passenger told reporters at the airport. "But I am quite sure no one had any worries."

He said the passengers wore their safety belts for most of the flight.

"We didn't have to take any other precautions at all."

Pilot of the Canadian airliner was Capt. Bruce Bowden of Montreal. He sent a radio message to Shannon when the first engine—the inner starboard—quit during the night. The plane was at 23,000 feet, and he asked emergency permission to go down to 11,000 feet—below an altitude where icing conditions existed.

About 700 miles west of Ireland, a second engine began to act up, and Bowden requested air control at Prestwick, Scotland, for an escort plane. British newspapers say it was feared the plane might have had to come down at sea, and that ships in the area were asked to keep a lookout.

The RAF plane "made visual contact about 40 miles off the Irish coast," said an RAF spokesman. "Over Shannon, the Canadian plane got three engines working and decided to continue to London. Our plane came back to its base."

'CHEAP' SAYS HUNGARIAN . . . 'MINE BETTER'

Canada 'Second Class' From Start Say Returning Olympic Athletes

TORONTO (CP)—A Canadian Olympic Games coach and some 20 team members arrived here early today from Melbourne and said they developed inferiority complexes at the Games.

"A Hungarian track athlete came up to me one day and felt my sweat suit," related canoeist George Bossey of Montreal. "Cheap," he told me. "Mine better."

Commented Bossey: "It was, too. I represented Canada, the world's second wealthiest nation, and this guy from a small European country was better dressed than the Canadian athletes."

The athletes arrived here by bus from Buffalo, N.Y. Their Trans-Canada Air Lines plane from Vancouver was diverted Friday night to Buffalo when bad weather prevented a landing at Malton airport.

Canoe coach Earl Whittall of Montreal was particularly annoyed at travelling conditions in Canada. He said athletes travelled by TCA's tourist flights both on the way to Vancouver en route to the Games and from the B.C. city on the way home.

"That means going 15 hours without a hot meal and without much sleep. . . . It is as though no one in Canada cares whether we are represented in the Games or not."

Bossey said Canadian athletes competed against others who had been subsidized, specially trained for four years or given the kind of jobs which afforded them all the time off they wanted for training.

"Let's face it," he said. "If Canada wants to do better than make a second class showing at the Games, it has to do the same thing as the other countries."

Dormitories Substandard At UBC—Moore

PORT ALBERNI — Unless the provincial government soon makes funds available to help the University of British Columbia, Canadians are likely to become mere "heavers of wood and drawers of water," it has been forecast by Jack Moore, IWA official here.

Quoting from the "Ubysey," campus students' publication, he said dormitory conditions at the university are below the minimum standards set by the Workmen's Compensation Board for logging camps.

"Students must double up for nearly everything," he said. A recent survey revealed seven men sharing each wash basin, 33 each bathtub, 34 each laundry tub, and 73 each telephone.

"Compensation board rules make such conditions illegal and punishable in logging and construction camps," he said.

URGENT NEED — Branding the Canadian public apathetic about the situation, Mr. Moore said the need is far greater and more urgent than most realized. Claiming that shortages of skilled university-trained men slowed down production in many parts of the country, Mr. Moore said: "If this situation is not rectified soon we shall gradually fall further and further behind other nations until our people end up heavers of wood and drawers of water."

"Money must be made available quickly to erect proper buildings, set up proper dormitories and residences for students from out of town, and pay faculty members a decent wage," Mr. Moore said.

"If money is not made available for these things, it could mean that students from outside communities will have to do without a university education," he said.

DEATH IN ELECTRIC CHAIR FOR BABY KIDNAP SLAYER

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP)—Angelo Lamacra, kidnaper slayer of baby Peter Weinberger, Friday was sentenced to die in Sing Sing Prison's electric chair the week of Jan. 28.

Lamacra was convicted a week ago by a jury of 12 fathers of kidnapping and first-degree murder. The verdict carried a mandatory death penalty.

ASSAULT CHARGE REDUCED

Rifleman Admits Hitting Cab Woman

A 20-year-old soldier pleaded guilty in Oak Bay police court Friday to a reduced charge of assault causing bodily harm in connection with an attack on a woman cab driver, Nov. 24.

A more serious charge of indecent assault against Leonard Harper, QOR, was withdrawn.

Harper was advised by Magistrate H. C. Hall a week ago to obtain legal counsel as the result of information contained in a probation report.

Counsel Alan Macfarlane said Friday: "On the basis of the report and what he (Harper) has told me, I ask to change the plea to not guilty."

Prosecutor Alan Bigelow consented to the application and then asked to withdraw the indecent assault charge and substitute the lesser assault charge.

SECOND TIME

Harper pleaded guilty to the second charge.

It was the second time the charge of assault causing bodily harm had been read to him in connection with the incident.

Saanich police laid the original charge Nov. 24, the morning after Island Cab driver Mrs. Vera Rodgers was attacked on a lonely road near the Gordon Head army camp.

Subsequent investigations showed that the assault had occurred in Oak Bay. The Saanich charge was withdrawn and the indecent assault charge laid in Oak Bay court.

Mr. Macfarlane said Friday Harper had "no explanation to offer" for striking the woman.

She had kicked him when he dragged her from the car and Harper retaliated by hitting her with his open hand, counsel said.

Later, when the cab crashed into a tree on Reynolds Road near Cedar Hill Cross Road, Harper had attempted to shield the woman from injury.

Mr. Macfarlane noted Harper's "comparative lack of education." The soldier's home is in Prince Albert, Sask.

Sentence will be imposed Wednesday.

Big U.S. Magazines Cease Publication

Collier's, Women's Home Companion Lost $7.5 Millions This Year

NEW YORK (UP)—Two of the oldest magazines in the U.S., Collier's and Woman's Home Companion, are going out of business.

Heavy financial losses were cited by Paul C. Smith, president of Crowell-Collier Publishing Co., which publishes both magazines.

Collier's, founded in 1888, will be suspended after the Jan. 4 issue. Woman's Home Companion, started in 1873, will cease publication with the January issue.

Smith said the magazines lost "over $7,500,000" this year.

Gardner Cowles, president of Cowles Magazines, Inc., which publishes Look magazine, said an agreement had been reached with Crowell-Collier to take over obligations for unfilled subscriptions for Collier's.

In addition, he said, his firm is acquiring the magazine title "Collier's."

Crowell-Collier is negotiating with other firms in regard to unexpired Woman's Home Companion subscriptions.

Collier's estimated total net paid circulation over the last eight issues has averaged 4,129,000.

In all, both magazines have unfilled subscriptions totaling about $18 million, according to Smith.

With the end of the two magazines, Crowell-Collier will go out of the magazine field.

The firm suspended the American Magazine last July after 80 years of publication.

Two student concerts were staged before capacity audiences Friday night.

At Lansdowne Junior High School, the Christmas program was highlighted by the drama society plays, "A Christmas Star for Olga" and "Why the Chimes Ring."

The girls' choir sang traditional English, German and French carols under direction of Malcolm Hamilton and Miss M. C. Mackay.

Three carols were sung by the boys' choir directed by A. W. Lewis and with Mr. Hamilton as accompanist.

The high school folk dancers were stand-outs of the show, performing seven numbers with spirit and aplomb.

Pleasant performances also were given by the band with three Christmas arrangements, "Jingle Bells Rhapsody," "Alouette in Three Moods" and "Song of the Bells"—and in a fluently graceful gymnastic display.

Senior schools' drama award winner in 1956, Sheila Brown, was excellent in the drama selection which took the form of a radio review.

Adding to the entertainment were Kenley Ryall as Santa Claus, Betty Bone and Joyce Denton in "Everyone's a Child at Christmas," and Georgia Neale singing "Christmas Eve Reverie."

The glee club was outstanding as "The Singing Christmas Tree."

Three officers appointments and a promotion in up-Island units of the Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's) were announced by commanding officer Lt. Col. Jack Fawcett.

Lt. P. Chaworth-Musters is promoted to captain and second in command of "A" Company, Duncan.

Lt. R. A. King is appointed officer commanding "D" Company, Port Alberni, and Capt. J. W. Taffie is officer commanding "C" Company, Courtenay.

The regiment has received notice that its colonel-in-chief, HRH the Princess Royal, who visited Victoria in October, 1955, has been made a general in the Women's Royal Army Corps.

HUNGARY'S FIGHTING STUDENTS

Oak Bay Pupils Aid Fund, Total Passes $4,200 Mark

Volunteers from the Junior Red Cross Club at Oak Bay Junior High School, who collected funds twice daily from classrooms between Dec. 7 and 14, raised $65 for the "Hungary Fighting Students" fund.

Even without the school contribution the fund now totals $4,217.30.

The students felt there was no better way of showing the Christmas spirit than helping those students less fortunate than they," said Mrs. Beverly Andersen, teacher in charge of the club.

"The Red Cross students were most co-operative, for there were many more volunteers than were needed to assist in the drive," she said.

Given credit for the campaign and the daily collections were Connie Ballam, Red Cross club president; Ron Morgan, vice-president; and members Penny Dalby, Joan Livesey, Russ Morgan, Gerry Shanks, Gordon Vickery, and David Bartlett.

The students have put a cheque for the donation in the mail, for delivery to The Times next week.

Following are the latest contributions to the fund:

B.C. Pupil Mathematical Wizard at 16

NORTH VANCOUVER, B.C. (CP)—Allan, 16-year-old grade 12 student, amazes his teachers by his knowledge of involved mathematics and science.

The boy amuses himself by working out involved problems the teachers cannot understand. Although he mastered an advanced type of slide-rule at 11, the extent of his talent was not discovered until two years ago when he solved a problem which had stumped his teachers.

"That trick question solved itself after I looked up a few astronomical and gravitational figures," Allan said. Later he came third in the Mathematical Contest of America.

He now is studying radio and wireless theory and getting first class honors in his university entrance course.

His high school principal, W. R. McDougall said Allan "seems to have a great future."

The young student said his work is his curiosity about astronomy, his favorite science.

"I hope to attend university, take science, and then decide on my career."

The restriction is within the terms of the School Act.

One school board member referred to the most concerned as "highway Romeos."

Discussion arose at a school board meeting when the proprietress of the shop complained to the board that she had suffered considerable loss of revenue at noon.

The condemned boy, Robert James Carter of London, killed his victim, Anthony John Wilmoughby, on board a ship taking him to the United States.
